

The Three Strings

With this string I wipe away the tears from your eyes. If ever I meet someone, who is in as much grief as I, I would surely express condolences to them, so that they may see clearly again their path here upon the earth.

With this string, I clear way the obstruction from your ears. If ever I meet someone, who is in as much grief as I, I would surely express condolences to them, so that they are able to hear the words again, that people are conveying to them.

With this string, I take away the parchedness from your throat. If ever I meet someone, who is in as much grief as I, I would surely express condolences to them, so that they may be able to speak to one another again

With this string, I wipe away the tears from your eyes.

With this string, I brush way the obstruction from your ears.

With this string, I give you water to take away the parchedness from your throat.

The dark clouds that hovered over you, are now wiped away, so that the sun may shine upon you once again.
