Wipfli-Update

At the time we started looking at this project, Wipfli estimated that it would cost $80,000 to modify our present system to get what it should do. A good portion of this figure included cost of labor of our accounting department.

After the first phase was complete, Wipfli felt that modification of our present system was not practical and recommended that we look for a package to fit our needs. At that time, it was felt that a package would cost $80,00 and Wipfli's bill would be another $30,000 to $70,000 or a total estimate of $110,000 to $150,000. None of this cost included cost of labor of the accounting department even though a sizeable portion of the work was to be done by our labor.

During the last phase, it was determined that a package could not be found that comes close to what we need without extensive modifications. As a result, Wipfli admits that the total cost of this project could come close to $200,000 without consideration of our own labor.

Since this project seems to have tripled in cost since we started, I feel that we must give serious consideration to the direction that we are going in.

It was agreed that the Tribe hold off on the third phase of the computer proposal.
