CLOSE AND PERSONAL

With Amy Sumner, Outreach Worker

Amy Sumner was born March 26, 1961 to Wayne and Cleo Cornelius in Oneida Wi. Amy grew up here in Oneida graduating in 1979 from Seymour High School. In 1981 Amy married and gave birth to two sons during her marriage. After he passed on she remarried in 1995. Amy moved to the Red Lake Reservation in 1990.

Amy lived there for almost 8 years. During this time She became a certified nursing assistant and worked at the Nursing home in Red Lake almost 6 years when she decided to move back home.

After moving back she worked at the Oneida Health Center as a receptionist for 2 years. She enjoyed her job but was not happy. Amy missed working with the elderly. When she was offered a respite position at the Elderly Services in 1999 she gladly accepted the position.. Then moved up to Outreach Worker in 2002.

The job working with elders has had its ups and downs. You can't help but fall in love with them and care for them, then have to lose them. The most rewards you can ever get from any of our elders is the past. They can tell you things you could never imagine would happen in this time of life. We hand things down to younger generations and continue to teach each other. The things they tell us are the most precious gift anyone could ever receive.

Amy's children are grown and She has three beautiful grandchildren. She is content with her life and could not ask for more. She is still blessed with both parents, and sadly have lost her favorite brother but she knows God has placed him among her grandparents and is much happier.. Of all the things She has learned in this life as of yet she has the most wonderful teachers and that is our elders.

In her spare time ,does respite care for Comfort Keepers in the evenings. Some days are long ,but she enjoys helping other people. All together she has worked with the elderly for 12 years now.

Lorna's Corner Elder Humor

This bit of humor happened when we first bought the 15 passenger van. Every summer we would go to the farmers markets, whether it was in Black Creek, Shiocton, Oneida, or Green Bay. The elders always bought their usual, cucumbers, beans, apples, melons, watermelon, and etc. After spending an afternoon at the farmers markets, our van was full of grocery bags filled with their purchases. In a 15 passenger van there's not much room to store their shopping, but they tried their best to keep their own bags together. So soon, with all the stopping and turning some of the bags tipped over. One elder yelled, "There goes my muskmelon! It's going your way, catch it if you can"! Then another would say, "if a couple of apples roll by you, their mine." Another would say, "Hey, I'm missing my big onion!"

As I was driving I couldn't stop, if we were in the city, so when I stopped at a certain elders home, than we would take inventory of each elders grocery bag to see who was missing what. In the end everyone found their fruit and veggies. That is when we realized we need a bus and we got one!!.

Wisdom Of The Elders What I Have Learned

When the land grows silent, the deer but a shadow in the night, a wolf howls for his lost mate, seeded plants bear nothing. Setting of the orange sun clouded, the moon sheds no more light, soaring eagles elusive, Indian flutes no longer heard whistling through old age pines, rivers become slower, the fires grow cold, tracks of the Old Ones hard to fine, cries to the Sky Father seem to go nowhere. Then Mother Earth has become ill. Do not say, "It is done", do not say, "there is no hope", do not say, "this is a way of life now gone." Do not say. " the Sky Father is not listening." Instead, believe in yourself and your teachings, and stand strong. Give the deer his freedom, a wolf his mate, plant stronger seeds. Look at the orange sun as a new beginning, the stars will give back reflections of moonlight. Mighty eagles, give them a resting place of safety, play your Indian flutes with conviction, release bonds that holds the rivers, place more wood upon sacred fires. Seeks the tracks to follow, they are not gone, only covered with years of dust. Do not say, "I am but one Indian".....join many hands among all of your relations, for we are plentiful in number and Mother Earth will heal! The Sky Father hears you.

Senior Fitness

Regular physical activity is important for people of all ages. Research shows that regular moderate physical activity can extend your life span and prevent or slow the development of chronic diseases.

Safety is very important during physical activity. The following is a list of guidelines that you should practice during all types of physical activity. Not following these guidelines during exercise may cause you serious harm or injury.

Safe Exercise Practices

- + Obtain medical clearance to exercise.
- + Don't exercise if you have pain.
- + Don't exercise when you are sick, injured, or running a temperature.
- + Don't overstrain during exercise.
- + Remember to breath! Never hold your breath during exercise.
- + Always warm up before you exercise.
- + Always cool down after exercising.
- + Drink plenty of water before, during, and after you exercise.
- + Avoid heavy meals for about 2 hrs before energetic exercise.
- + Think safety at all times.
- + Work at an effective, yet comfortable, intensity level. You should be able to carry on a normal conversation during exercise.
- + Stop exercising and consult your physician immediately if you experience any of the following:
  - > Chest pain or tightness of the neck or throat.
  - > Considerable difficulty breathing.
  - > Abnormal heart rhythm, nausea, dizziness, or light headedness.
  - > Excessive cold sweat or extreme or lasting weakness or fatigue after exercising. □

A Cup Of Tea Is Good News For Diabetic

Tea could turn out to be a diabetic's best friend, according to US Dept. of Ag. scientists. They have found that green, black, and oolong teas can boost the activity of insulin, the hormone that controls blood sugar levels.

Tea drinkers of the world will tell you of the delights of a nice cuppa. Medical scientists have over the past few years revealed how tea has many health benefits, too, because of the presence of some aromatic chemicals known as polyphenols. Polyphenols are thought to be the active ingredients, giving tea its protective effects against damaging free radicals found in the body. Polyphenols can even kill bacteria, some viruses, and cancer cells, at least in the laboratory, although there is evidence of a reduced risk of these diseases in tea drinkers.

Food chemists Richard Anderson and Marilyn Polansky at the USDA's human nutrition center has infused the scientific literature with another benefit of the leaves of Camellia sinensis. Anderson and colleagues have been looking for a way to keep blood sugar levels steady in diabetics for more than a decade. If successful, their results could reduce a patient's reliance on injected insulin. They looked at many different plants and spices for an effect on insulin activity, but recently turned to tea.

The scientist extracted all the components that showed any effect on insulin and discovered that just one natural chemical, known as epigallocatechin gallate, is almost wholly responsible for the effect. This compound, a polyphenol, has been known to work as an antioxidant.

"The lack of control of blood sugar leading to glucose intolerance and ultimately diabetes is one of the leading causes of poor health" Anderson and Polansky have now discovered that tea increases insulin activity by more than 20 times in laboratory test. "Tea is likely to improve the body's ability to respond to insulin, leading to lower levels of insulin and blood sugar" Anderson said.

Interesting, although many types of tea can affect insulin activity, none of the herbal varieties has any effect. "Herbal teas are not teas in the traditional sense since they do not contain leaves of Camellia sinensis," explains Anderson.

Anderson and colleagues report their findings in the Journal of Agricultural and Food Chemistry.

Parkinson's Disease (PA)

A series of articles about PA will appear in the Drums on a monthly bases.

Parkinson's Disease is now being noticed more and more by the medical profession because people in Oneida are experiencing PA symptoms.

Have you ever thought about how it's possible for your body to move-it just happens when we want it to? Before reading more about PA and it's treatment it may be helpful to understand a little more about how our body movements are controlled.

Our brain is made up of many different areas in a complex chain of decisions required for even the smallest muscular movement. For walking, our brain must first gather all the information it needs about our body's position. Example, are you sitting, lying down, or standing up? Where are your feet? Do you have your balance? Now your brain must add what it knows about where you will be going. Do your eyes tell your brain that you'll be out walking on a nature path or a busy street. Do your feet detect that the ground is easy to walk on or that you could lose your balance because it is uneven and narrow.

All this information comes together in a central area of the brain which controls many aspects of our body movements, this area of the brain also works with other areas of the brain to send out the commands for balance and coordination. These commands go from the brain to the spinal cord through nerve networks to the muscles that will help you to move.

Our whole nerve system is made up of single units called nerve cells. These nerve cells serve as a "communication network" within our body. To communicate with each other, the nerve cells use chemical messengers called Neurotransmitters that carry messages between nerve cells by crossing the space between cells, called the synapse.

Neurotransmitters also allow the nervous system to communicate with your body's muscles and translate thought into motion. One especially important messenger is Dopamine, which is manufactured in the controlling decision making area of the brain.

More about Dopamine and how crucial it is to our human movement in the July issue of the Drums.

Securing the Present and Protecting the Future

Confused about the new Medicare Modernization Act? Concerned about the proposed changes to Social Security? These topics and more will be addressed at the CWAG annual statewide convention, June 2-4, 2004 at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center in Green Bay.

The convention theme, "Securing the Present and Protecting the Future," explores how CWAG and senior advocates can secure current programs and services for older adults and protect the quality of life for Wisconsin seniors in the years to come. Programming will be focused on three key issues: the recent changes to the Medicare program, the proposals for changing the Social Security program and the progress (or lack thereof) of long term care reform.

"It is crucial that seniors are aware and informed about these topics and understand the impact they will have on their lives," says Tom Frazier. "Convention is our opportunity to educate the general public and keep them informed about the choices that are available.

This year the event is expected to draw between 600-800 attendees. Those in attendance will experience a variety of activities such as educational workshops, health screenings, both a live and silent auction, and more than 60 exhibitors displaying information on products and services specifically for older people. Guest will also have the opportunity to listen to nationally known speakers Josefina Carbonell, the assistant Secretary for Aging at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and Ron Pollack, Executive Director of Families USA. In addition, guest will be entertained with performances by "Frank's Dinner Theater" and "The Odd Couple."

"It's an amazing convention and we encourage the public to attend." Barbara Thoni, Director of Member Services explains, "It's a wonderful opportunity for senior and advocates to come together and discuss their issues and concerns.

For those who are unable to attend the full convention, individuals have the opportunity to attend Wednesday only and participate in "Community Appreciation Day." Participants can explore the exhibit hall and attend workshops free of charge. For a fee of $15 individuals will be able to participate in the lunch program, which includes the performance by "Franks Dinner Theater."

For more information or to register contact Peggy Ryneerson, Convention Coordinator at 1-800-368-2990 or visit www.cwag.org.

ONEIDA NATION
COMMISSION ON AGING
WORKING SESSION - MAY 12, 2004
10:00 A.M.
N.I.C.O.A. BOOTH

IN ATTENDANCE: Mary Edna Greendeer, Dorothy J. Skenandore, Dellora Cornelius, Arlie Doxtator, Valder John, Tina Pospychala, Florence Petri, Frank Schersing, Susan Daniels.

Initial discussion took place around the issue of the Older Americans Act and proposed changes in funding. Frank gave everyone a legislative update and suggested we begin the process of lobbying for funding. Tribes should lobby to get included in Elder Abuse funding. There has been a continuing resolution for OAA since 2000. Money is being focused on homeland security and the war effort.

We can/should include information regarding the status of the OAA in our booth. We need to ask for funds in the proposed increase under Family Caregiver to be allocated to tribes. To stay informed, we can access BAAA's website, locate the form letter to write about our concerns, and call the legislative hotline if it's a state issue.

We asked Frank if he would provide a once-a-month legislative workshop with ONCOA. He indicated he would try.

BOOTH: Bay Area Agency on Aging will have information about the Older Americans Act and a video on the Aging Network. Elderly Services will have information on the Faith-In-Action program, the Native American Caregivers video, flyers and the resource directory. ONCOA will have their videos. We would like to depict a working relationship between the groups. The thought was to have a circle poster depicting the interrelationship between the groups. There can be pictures of individuals involved in different activities.

NEXT MEETING: May 27, 2004 at 10:00 a.m. Each individual should bring the following to the next meeting:

Tina will take "candid" pictures of individuals for the poster.

Noreen with contact Garth Webster to create the poster.

Frank will bring brochures and a video.

Sue will bring a work schedule for everyone to sign up.

Maybe we can get a couple of aprons with our logo on it. As people work at the stand, they can wear the apron.
