Sustainable Tourism

Keshena, WI – Sustainable Tourism: Naturally Attractive is the conference theme chosen by the NATOW (Native American Tourism of Wisconsin) group for their annual gathering which was held earlier this week on a reservation which is known for its sustainable practices in forestry. The Menominee Casino Resort in Keshena is where NATOW organizers planned to highlight programs and methods to help all businesses, Native and non-Native alike, become more environmentally friendly.

"As stewards of the land, we Native Americans have always taken pride in maintaining our environment while developing our communities and economies," said Kirby Metoxen of the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin and acting NATOW Chairman, "Now we want to share our belief system and help all communities in their sustainability efforts."

The Menominee Nation is the perfect setting for sustainability. The tribal lands encompass 223,500 acres of heavily forested lands, representing the largest single tract of virgin timberland in Wisconsin and the wild and natural beauty of the Wolf River. The College of the Menominee Nation also showcased its sustainability program at the Conference.

Dan Ninham hired as Bemidji basketball coach

By Pat Miller

Bemidji Pioneer

BEMIDJI – During his 12 years as head boys basketball coach at Cass Lake-Bena Dan Ninham turned a small-town program into a perennial state championship contender.

In time the Panthers developed into the kings of Section 8A and during Ninham's final six years at the helm CL-B appeared in five state basketball tournaments. During a run which saw the Panthers play in four consecutive tourneys, Ninham's teams posted a runner-up and a pair of third-place finishes.

His coaching philosophy is based around pressure defense and pressure offense and any opponent that plans to stay with a Ninham-coached team better be prepared to constantly run up and down the court.

"We have had success offensively and defensively with our high tempo brand of basketball," Ninham said.

Two years ago Ninham left the Panthers and last winter he served as an assistant coach at Red Lake. On Friday he was named the new head boys coach at Bemidji High School.

"Susan (his wife) and our entire family are excited about this opportunity," Ninham said. "I look at this as a win-win for both the high school and for us. I think this is a great day to be a Lumberjack."

Ninham is a physical education teacher at the Bemidji Middle School and Bemidji activities director Troy Hendricks was happy to announce the appointment.

"Dan already has proven that he is a successful basketball coach," Hendricks said. "He also is a teacher in the district and is here for the kids. He is a man of character and we fell in love with his approach to building a program."

Ninham replaces Jeff Brown who resigned following the 2011-2012 season. Brown was on the BHS varsity bench for 10 seasons and last winter his team fell one game short of advancing to the state tournament.

When it was possible Ninham watched the Lumberjacks and he was impressed by what he saw.

"They were a senior-laden team last year but what I noticed were the talents at the younger levels," Ninham said. "I see a bright future for this program and we will get after things right away."

"The bottom line is that not only are we building a team, we are building a program. And I plan to be here for quite a while so we can do that."

Just Move It Oneida

Kali photos/Dawn Walschinski

Just Move It Oneida held a fun family event Wednesday evening, June 13. Participants such as Jesus Hernandez, top, made their own bubble solution and wands. Others such as Sharon Mousseau, right, took part in a Zumba class.

From 1A/Sustainable Tourism

Dr. Daniel R. Wildcat was the first speaker to set the premise with his message to the attendees.

After being introduced by Dr. Verna Fowler, CMN College President, he made a point to reference how CMN stands out (in his mind) among tribal colleges and universities in Indian country.

He shared four key points with the group with relation to the unique cultural personality that indigenous people have to showcase their individual locations in the area of tourism.

The first was Power and Place equals Personality. It's the right model/strategy for success. "We ought to play to our strengths as Indigenous people," he said.

Quoting Satchel Paige, he shared Paiges' definition of Indigenous, which is - To have an identity that connects your people to a place.

Dr. Wildcat had his own key word - 'Indigenuity' that he referenced quite often throughout his message. His new book Red Alert: Saving the Planet with Indigenous Knowledge, suggests current global climate change issues will require the exercise of Indigenous Ingenuity - Indigenuity - and wisdom if humankind is to reduce the ecological damage well underway. The second point he

"We ought to play to our strengths as Indigenous people"

shared was in the area of Health, and Fitness Opportunities outdoors. Posing the question, "How do you want to attract people to your homelands?"

The third point was in the area of education. "Learn valuable lessons from relatives in your community," explained Dr. Wildcat. "People are hungry to go places and learn something they don't know," he added. "Who better to tell the history than those who have lived here." An experiential basis of learning - not necessarily inside a classroom, he suggested.

The fourth and final point was the development of a communities' sustainability in a qualitative, value added experience. "Menominee is a perfect example," he explained, pointing out the 'naturally attractive' area, which also offers white water rafting on the homelands.

"Make those exercises of Indigenuity," he said, adding, "We can create incredible tourism opportunities."

He shared one final thought he heard from an elder many years ago - the Natural Law - which is to Respect the Land, Air and Water.

Sarah Klavas, Wisconsin Department of Tourism Industry Relations and Services Bureau Director and Ernest Stevens, Chairman of NIGA (National Indian Gaming Association), both had opportunities to welcome and address the attendees on Monday as well. Klavas paid homage to the tribes for their cultural contributions in their communities and shared a variety of initiatives that are in place in Wisconsin. Stevens stressed the importance of the partnership with tourism, saying it was "vital" adding that the business of tourism is a natural for Indian country.

He also shared some personal experiences he endured growing up but shifted the focus on his motivation, his grandmother who just recently celebrated her 102nd birthday and her struggles in life.

The conference concluded on Wednesday with a NATOW Golf Fundraiser and an evening Awards Banquet. The Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa will host the NATOW conference in 2013.

Groups in 13 states want US to block Internet bets

By Wayne Parry

Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) ~ Family-centric groups in 13 states are calling on Congress to block states across the nation from legalizing Internet gambling, saying the societal costs will far outweigh the benefit to tax coffers.

They want Congress to strengthen the Unlawful Internet Gambling Enforcement Act "to ensure its clear intent that the Internet not become a giant online casino."

The groups are from Wisconsin, Kentucky, Louisiana, North and South Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Hawaii, Georgia and Tennessee.

The U.S. Justice Department ruled in December that in-state online bets not involving sports teams do not violate federal law. That has touched off a race by cash-strapped state governments to try to legalize Internet gambling.

Several national family groups expressed similar concerns last month.

"The bottom line is we are The Family Foundation, and expansion of gambling through casinos or online is targeting one group only: moms and dads," said Kent Ostrander, founder of The Family Foundation of Kentucky. "It's an effort to separate a family from its assets. The family is the building block of any society, and yet it is the most vulnerable institution in that society."

Ostrander said there is a push in Kentucky, as in many other states, to add slot machines or casino-style gambling to race-tracks in order to increase the tracks' viability.

He said the added tax revenue to state governments will be more than offset by the societal costs of expanded gambling, particularly if it is made as easy as logging on to a computer.

"We are going to find ourselves with more broken homes and families than we can afford," he said.

The groups sent letters to congressional leaders asking them to strengthen the Internet Gambling law to make it clear that online betting is not what lawmakers wanted. "We must protect our children and families from the destruction of safeguards Congress has previously established," they wrote.

Referring to the Justice Department's December interpretation of the law allowing in-state Internet gambling, the groups wrote that the decision "unleashed actions by a growing number of revenue-hungry state governments to turn the Internet into the largest casino ever, and welcoming into homes a greater social cost than any government can handle. This action is undermining Congress' clear intent when it passed the Unlawful Internet Gambling Enforcement Act in 2006 that online gambling should be prohibited."

Many states, including New Jersey and Nevada, are rushing to be among the first to get Internet gambling up and running before the competition. At the East Coast Gaming Congress last month in Atlantic City, a panel of industry and Wall Street experts predicted that Internet gambling will soon become a reality on a state-by-state basis, rather than by a national law, because Congress is too divided to agree on such a far-reaching measure.

Wisconsin officials strengthen fight against human trafficking

By Mario Koran

Wisconsin Center for Investigative Journalism

WISCONSIN DELLS

- Wisconsin law enforcement leaders acknowledge they need to do a better job of attacking criminals who enslave victims in sex and labor markets. And this week, about 300 officials received training on how to identify cases of human trafficking -- which often are not spotted because victims are fearful to speak out.

"It's an issue that's happening right under our noses, it's an issue that we frequently categorize wrong," Wisconsin Attorney General J.B. Van Hollen said Thursday as he launched a two-day summit for law enforcement officials at Chula Vista Resort.

Law enforcement officers, prosecutors and victim-assistance specialists attended, along with survivors of human trafficking who shared their stories.

Lisa Tritt-Feleshchuk told the group that while attending college at Arizona State University, she met a man who became her boyfriend but later coerced her into prostitution.

Tritt-Feleshchuk said the man forced her to give massages and sell her body to strangers.

Over time, she grew dependent on him for survival and acceptance. "I wasn't lured by drugs. I was lured only by the promise of love," she said.

"While most prostitution stories end in jail, that's where my journey begins."

Tritt-Feleshchuk served time in jail for prostitution, but her boyfriend escaped charges and abandoned her to focus on younger women in Eastern Europe.

Today, Tritt-Feleshchuk works on behalf of trafficking survivors and is calling for a law that would allow victims to have their records expunged if they were forced to commit their crimes.

Human trafficking involves controlling or attempting to control a person by force, fraud, or coercion. Its victims include children involved in the sex trade, adults who are coerced or deceived into commercial sex acts, and anyone forced into labor or services.

Jeff Stillings, group supervisor for the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, played video clips to illustrate signs of trafficking: Often a "spokesman" mediates between victims and public safety officials, while the trafficker withholds victims' passports.

The crimes remain difficult to prosecute. According to a report by the Bureau of Justice Statistics, between January 2008 and June 2010, federally funded task forces opened 2,515 suspected incidents of human trafficking for investigation. Yet, during that same period, only 389 incidents were confirmed cases of human trafficking, which included 488 suspects and 527 victims.

In a recent news release, Van Hollen said there's a need for better data. "We know human trafficking is happening in Wisconsin," Van Hollen wrote, "but we need to know more about the extent and nature of the problem locally."

Last August, the Wisconsin Center for Investigative Journalism reported that over the past decade, people have been trafficked to Wisconsin from at least 17 countries, including Brazil, China, Colombia, Ecuador, Guatemala, India, Laos, Lithuania, Mexico, Moldova, Nigeria, Peru, Philippines, Russia, Rwanda, Ukraine and Uzbekistan. Many additional victims were American citizens.

Experts quoted in that report said that since enacting a state law against human trafficking in 2008, Wisconsin had done little to expose situations in which hundreds of state residents, including children, live as virtual slaves. They said Wisconsin lacked money for data collection, education, law enforcement training and victim services that could bring more cases to light.

Just a handful of cases have been prosecuted in Wisconsin under state and federal anti-trafficking laws.

Jill Karofsky, director of the Office of Crime Victim Services at the state Department of Justice, noted that because victims are often reluctant to testify, elements of trafficking are difficult to prove and defendants plead to lesser charges such as soliciting prostitution. The state recently published a guide to help law enforcement agencies crack down on trafficking.

"You're talking about a crime that's driven underground by the people who perpetuate it," said Karofsky, who expressed optimism that the new training will lead to more prosecutions.

"As soon as it becomes above ground, they're going to get caught."

fireplace in the main sitting room on the first floor. It was only removed to allow slaves to go to the attic as part of the Underground Railroad.

We rented a large bedroom and had kitchen privileges as well as use of the entire large house. Uncle Charlie charged us $50.00 a month. I washed the sheets in an ancient gas operated washing machine for all five bedrooms and did some other minor chores. He paid me $10.00 a week for that, so we had virtually no costs for staying in that magnificent historical house.

The Mid-Cape Railroad ran behind the house. Spring Hill was on the other side of that. I discovered the entire hill was covered with high bush blueberries. I attached a bail handle kettle to my belt and picked many quarts. There were empty canning jars available, so I set to work canning all the blueberries. Uncle Charlie had relatives who were wool merchants. They spent a lot of time on the Cape in the summertime—at Skiffe House. One weekend they caught a 125 pound tuna, and they gave it to me. I created a steamer to process the tuna. I cleaned it, sliced into two inch parcels and steamed it off the bones. It worked perfectly, so I canned the whole tuna.

Cape Cod is where I learned about seafood. I ate fried clams, stuffed clams and clam chowder. There were places that served "lobster in the rough" outdoors on wooden picnic tables. I learned to cook salt codfish and scallops. Uncle Charlie's son, Freole, took us out on Long Island Sound in a converted PT boat to troll for bluefish. I caught five. They weighed four and five pounds apiece. They are very good eating.

The wool merchants often entertained guests. They usually served lamb: roast leg of lamb with mint jelly, Irish stew, lamb chops. They included us in the feasting. It was my first experience with eating lamb. Today, I buy it if it on sale because it is very expensive.

Our first daughter, Gail, was born at the Otis Air Force Base Hospital. My doctor was a civilian named Dr. Hartwell. I did not go to the Base doctors because women in service then were not allowed to have children (married or not). The Mashpee Indian Reservation was just outside the back gate of the Base. I had to drive through the Reservation on my way to work. One night, Dr. Hartwell made a house call to deliver a baby there. On his way home in the early morning hours, he fell asleep, hit a tree and died.

The Mashpees are descendants of the very people who helped the Pilgrims to survive.

Now, they have lost nearly all their original homelands to conglomerate development corporations. The Federal Courts did not rule in their favor.

Horseshoe crabs, hermit crabs, quahogs and all kinds of clams, shore birds of many descriptions live in the water, in the sand or along the shoreline. Life on the beach or near the shore is very interesting. There are salt marshes. Salt marsh hay was harvested for fodder by those who kept cattle and horses on the Cape. The rivers and streams are filled with herring runs during certain times of the year.

The climate is moderated by the effects of the ocean and bay. There are not the extreme cold temperatures that the Midwest has in the winter. However, when I lived there, there was a massive snow storm that stopped all transportation for nearly a week. The summer winds off the ocean and the bay were most comforting when walking the beaches.

Otis Air Force Base is in the town of Bourne, at Falmouth, Massachusetts. I served my tour of duty here, in the Eastern Air Defense Command. It is here that I met and married Wilfred Pauson Ellis. By this time, he had served 12 years in the military. He had just returned from a three year tour in Japan. His family was all Cap Codders and all his grand fathers were sea captains. Captain Theodore Ellis owned his own sailing vessel and possessed a license to sail the seven seas. Captain Richard E. B. We lived off base in a little town called East Sandwich. We were very fortunate to have met Uncle Charlie Orcutt. He was a widower who owned and lived in Skiffe House which was built in 1638—yes, 1638. It had all original oyster shell plaster. There were fireplaces in every room which were higher than I was tall. The tiny window panes had bubbles and swirls in them, indicative of having been made more than a hundred years ago. The furnishings included a chair once used by President Thomas Jefferson. There was a secret panel in place alongside the large

Harvard University announces no tuition and no student loans

Harvard University announced that undergraduate students from low-income families will pay no tuition. In making the announcement, Harvard's president Lawrence H. Summers said, "When only ten percent of the students in elite higher education come from families in the lower half of the income distribution, we are not doing enough. We are not doing enough in bringing elite higher education to the lower half of the income distribution."

If you know of a family earning less than $60,000 a year with an honor student graduating from high school soon, Harvard University wants to pay the tuition. The prestigious university recently announced that from now on undergraduate students from low-income families can go to Harvard for free... no tuition and no student loans!

To find out more about Harvard offering free tuition for families making less than $60,000 a year, visit Harvard's financial aid website at: <http://www.fao.fas.harvard.edu/> or call the school's financial aid office at (617) 495-1581.

Shooting of teen reopens Milwaukee's racial wounds

MILWAUKEE (AP) ~ Darius Simmons was buried between two tall maple trees, nine days after he was gunned down, allegedly by an angry neighbor who believed the 13-year-old had stolen his shotguns.

The tragedy has reopened wounds in Milwaukee, which has a long history of racial strife, the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reported Sunday. A black boy shot at close range; the suspect, a 75-year-old white man now charged with first-degree intentional homicide. The boy and his family recently moved to the block, where the man has lived for decades, watching the neighborhood change from all-white to multi-ethnic.

And police are accused of treating the victim's family with a heavy hand. They grilled Darius' mother for two hours while the boy lay dead and left the family's house in disarray after scouring it in vain for the shotguns. They also arrested one of Darius' brothers for a year-old truancy violation.

"This was a huge, huge loss - one of those injustices that you can't even calculate," the Rev. Willie Brisco, president of the Milwaukee Inner-city Congregations Allied for Hope, said at the youth's funeral Saturday. "You want to be angry but you realize that anger doesn't solve it."

"It's just unconscionable," Rainbow Push Coalition executive Tavis Grant said at the services, which drew a couple of hundred mourners to All Peoples Church, a multiracial Lutheran congregation.

Also attending was Mayor Tom Barrett, who on Friday promised an investigation of how police treated Darius' mother, Patricia Larry. So were three aldermen, the president of the Milwaukee branch of the NAACP and representatives of the Nation of Islam.

Darius attended at All Peoples Church, where he worked in the garden, cracked jokes frequently, occasionally whispered with friends during prayers, but always, Pastor Steve Jerbi said, responded respectfully when called to account.

Trees For Tomorrow offers Wood Energy Workshop

Eagle River, WI - Teachers seeking university credit and professional development are encouraged to register for Trees For Tomorrow's workshop entitled: Utilizing Wood for Energy: The Options Are Nearly Endless, taking place on July 23-25, 2012. The workshop will be taught by Mr. Don Peterson, President of Renewable Resource Solutions, LLC and a member of the Wisconsin Consulting Forester Association. An advantageous and grant-supported education opportunity for teachers, this course is aimed at professionals striving to expand the depth of their natural resources knowledge for direct application in the classroom. Register early, space is limited!

Attendees will gain experience in adapting a wood energy curriculum specific to their own community/area, the ability to explain the various wood energy products currently available and how they are produced, and the economic/societal/environmental impacts of using wood energy while earning two graduate credits. They will explore historical, current, and potential uses of wood for producing warming heat, process heat, electricity, liquid fuels, and even air conditioning. Teachers have the chance to travel on-location to observe in progress, the harvesting and processing of woody biomass and view on-site uses for wood energy. Take home classroom activities for educators will include determining moisture and BTU content of woody biomass samples, how to evaluate your school or other facilities in your community for feasibility of conversion to a wood boiler system, and much more. Trees For Tomorrow workshop participants will benefit from highly respected and knowledgeable contemporaries in their field, enthusiastic to contribute to natural resources education!

The Wisconsin State Energy Office has provided a generous grant for participating teachers to cover instruction fees, food, lodging and credit tuition for this workshop. A $50 non-refundable deposit is required to register for the three-day course. Interested educators will find complete information in the form of downloadable PDF documents outlining the course description, daily schedule and credit criteria at www.treesfortomorrow.com by clicking the Programs tab. To register by phone for Utilizing Wood for Energy: The Options Are Nearly Endless, call Trees For Tomorrow's office at (715) 479-6456.

Trees For Tomorrow is a natural resources specialty school located in Eagle River, Wisconsin. Various programs are offered for all ages throughout the year that place participants in direct contact with natural resources that support human needs. These programs develop awareness, knowledge and understanding of natural resources to help participants understand and make informed decisions regarding the management and wise use of those resources. The experience inspires informed participation in policymaking and promotes stewardship and renewal of natural resources for use by future generations.

Chairman's Corner...

Ed Delgado
Chairman

Shekoli,

Community Concern Equates to a Safer Community

The Site I Oneida Indian Community has recently been the place where a couple of bad things have happened (standoff with police, stabbing incident and continuing gang problem). But Site I continues to be, in my mind anyway, a good place to be. Surrounded by woods, a river and green space, the community is not only the place where my youngest daughter was born some 20 years ago, it is also the home of a great recreational center, a very vibrant community library and is where some great Oneida people live.

Fritz Hill lives in Site I. He's lived there for many years. With the recent road construction, he saw that Oneida children were being forced to take alternate routes to get to Site I's baseball fields. He saw that the alternate routes were dangerous to the children and he sought out solutions. When he contacted my Office, my Executive Assistant Kitty Melchert and I went to Fritz and he showed us the problem and made a recommendation on how to solve the problem. With the expedient cooperation of Oneida Housing and Oneida Recreation, it was decided to create an alternate walkway to the baseball fields. As of yesterday, work on the new walkway began and very soon Oneida children in the area will be safer. Mr. Fritz Hill is truly one of those great Oneida people who live in Site I. He cares.

I'm an Indian - not Native American

For the almost 7 years that I have been on the Oneida Business Committee, I've consistently objected to being called a Native American, sometimes to the point of probably giving some of my colleagues on the OBC a big headache. Sorry. I think maybe I'm old fashioned. Being an Indian is good enough for me. Or maybe it's because I never read an Indian treaty that used the word Native American. I know that our Oneida treaties with the United States contain no mention of the term. We're Indians in those treaties and my rights to be an Oneida and live on this Reservation as an Oneida Indian are rested in those treaties. Those treaties set us aside not as a minority citizen of the United States, but as a separate classification with specific rights under the United States Constitution. I believe using the term Native American to identify ourselves diminishes that special classification and makes just another minority group, even though those minority groups are also great people like us. Today, in some of its policies, the US government uses the term

Native American as a completely self-identifiable term and thus anyone can identify themselves as Native American and receive employment and educational benefits once granted to Indian people. It would seem that Indian leaders would want to protect the terms within our treaties. I am one Indian who will protect every term within our treaties by staying an Indian.

Tribal Sovereignty Continues to be Targeted

Bob Eberle, according to the Spokeman-Review, lives on the Swinomish Indian Reservation on Puget Sound in Washington State. Mr. Eberle, who is not a Swinomish Indian, is calling for federal force to make it mandatory to allow non-Swinomish people to vote in Swinomish Tribal elections. Elerle says in the article, "This business about the Indian having authority is a bunch of bunk." The article also carries a quote from a John Fleming, also a long time crusader against Indian sovereignty. The quote by Fleming has him saying, "The U.S. Army and the Air Force and the Marines and the National Guard are going to have to battle back." It sound like Washington State has some real backward and hateful bigots in their mist. Hopefully, they are few, and perhaps someday they will have to meet their maker to account.

Thank You for reading

Sincerely,
Ed Delgado

Birding adventure in Oneida

ONEIDA NATION— Experience all the birding opportunities in the Oneida Nation in this weekend's episode of Discover Wisconsin, developed in partnership with Oneida Nation. Shot over the past year, the episode will air Saturday, June 23 and Sunday, June 24 on the Discover Wisconsin broadcast network, reaching 250,000 viewers across the upper Great Lakes region, including Minnesota, Iowa, Northern Illinois and Upper Michigan. The episode airs state-wide on Fox Sports WI on Saturday morning at 10AM, and locally on WFRV TV-5 Green Bay on Saturday evening at 6:30PM.

The episode will highlight several restored wetlands, Salt Pork Avenue, Bay Beach Wildlife Sanctuary, and the many species of birds you can expect to see in the Oneida Nation. Michelle Danforth Anderson, Marketing and Tourism Director of Oneida Nation is proud of the land the tribe has. "We will be one of the first Native tribes in Wisconsin to offer guided bird watching tours," said Anderson.

Show host Emmy Fink admits she hadn't spent much time birding before this, but sees why so many find it enjoyable. "The rare birds you can spot in the Oneida Nation, such as eagles, canvasbacks and many types of waterfowl make it a birding paradise" said Fink. Show producer, Danielle Bernard has really enjoyed this assignment. "I think viewers will be surprised to see all of the natural beauty we also found while birding, you don't have to be a bird enthusiast to enjoy Wisconsin's wild life and gorgeous landscapes," said Bernard. Discover Wisconsin is the nation's longest running tourism program, and is celebrating its 25th Anniversary throughout 2012. To learn more go to www.discoverwisconsin.com.

Kohl bids farewell to state party Democrats

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) – Herb Kohl, who has represented Wisconsin in the U.S. Senate since 1988, expressed gratitude to fellow Democrats Saturday, who in turn showered the senator with applause and chants after his farewell speech at the state party's annual convention.

Kohl, 77, announced last year that he would not be seeking a fifth six-year term.

Kohl told several hundred Democrats gathered at the convention that the next steps for the Democratic Party of Wisconsin should be focused on preserving the unifying grass-roots support that drove the recall election between Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett and Gov. Scott Walker.

The crowd stood and applauded as Barrett introduced Kohl.

"I want to make sure that we all recognize the incredible commitment he's made to this state, not just for the 24 years he's been an elected official, but for his entire adult life," Barrett said. "I want to give my thanks to him."

Kohl told Democrats he was thankful for the chance to serve in the Senate.

"As I look back on my time with you, I am forever grateful for the chance that you gave me, to be your senator," Kohl said. "It has been the greatest honor and responsibility of my lifetime, and I have loved every minute of it."

Kohl has endorsed U.S. Rep. Tammy Baldwin as his replacement. She will likely face the winner of the Aug. 14 GOP primary. Tommy Thompson, a former governor who was secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services under President George W. Bush; former U.S. Rep. Mark Neumann; state Assembly Speaker Jeff Fitzgerald; and millionaire hedge fund manager Eric Hovde are vying for the Republican nomination.

Before serving in the Senate, Kohl helped build his family-owned business, Kohl's grocery and department stores. He served as president from 1970 through the sale of the corporation in 1979. In 1985 he bought the Milwaukee Bucks.

Kohl serves on the Senate Appropriations Committee, Judiciary Committee, Banking Committee, and the Special Committee on Aging, of which he is chairman.

Kohl told Democrats he won't completely disappear from politics.

"I'm not going anywhere," he said. "I'll always be around to help you, and us and the great party that we represent as we serve the people of Wisconsin today, tomorrow and in the decades to come."

The crowd chanted, "Thank You. Thank You," as he finished his speech.

Sacred artifacts being returned to NY tribe

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) ~ A central New York historical organization is returning artifacts, including a rare wampum belt believed to be more than two centuries old, to an Iroquois tribe.

The wampum belt will be repatriated to the Onondaga Indian Nation during a ceremony Tuesday at the Onondaga Historical Association's museum in Syracuse, Gregg Tripoli, the association's executive director, said Wednesday.

The historical organization has recently returned human skeletal remains and several sacred ceremonial masks to the Onondagas, whose reservation is south of Syracuse.

The repatriation of the artifacts, first reported by the Post-Standard of Syracuse, was prompted by a now-deceased Onondaga clan mother who told the association's new executive director that his organization had items belonging to the tribe, including the wampum belt.

Tripoli said it's believed all the Onondagas' other wampum belts were lost when American troops destroyed Onondaga and other Iroquois villages during the American Revolution.

The belt being returned to the tribe is made of white and purple shells. Tripoli said it was obtained in 1919 by a Syracuse historian who worked for years with the Onondagas. The belt's origins have been traced back to William Claus, a Canadian government and military official who interacted with the Six Nations of the Iroquois Confederacy in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. The wampum is marked with his initials and the year 1800.

Sid Hill, an Onondaga spiritual leader, said the tribe will find ceremonial purpose in the masks, commonly known as false faces. He credited Dorothy Webster, an Onondaga clan mother who died in 2010, with getting the items returned to the tribe.

"Hopefully, it will send a message to other people to do the right thing," he said. "How much more sacred can it get than to want your ancestors' bones to be at rest? We want the ones we put to rest to have a good journey; all of our teaching about the cycle of life is surrounded by that."

Voters in Mass. city say 'yes' to tribal casino

TAUNTON, Mass. (AP) ~ The Mashpee Wampanoag tribe got a vote of confidence from Taunton residents as the tribe pushes forward with plans to develop a $500 million resort casino.

By a nearly 2-1 margin, voters in Saturday's referendum expressed support for having a casino in their southeastern Massachusetts community, according to the Taunton clerk's office.

While nonbinding, the 7,693-4,571 vote marks the first time local residents have expressed support for a casino project at the ballot box since Gov. Deval Patrick signed the state's new gambling law last year.

The law legalized casino gambling, authorizing the state to license up to three resort-style casinos and giving exclusive rights to a federally recognized Indian tribe to develop one of the casinos if the tribe can reach a compact with the state by July 31. The Indian casino would have to be in southeastern Massachusetts.

Voters in the towns of Freetown and Lakeville recently gave a thumbs-down to a less detailed casino proposal offered by the Wampanoag Tribe of Aquinnah.

"We are overwhelmed by this resounding victory in Taunton," Tribal Council chairman Cedric Cromwell said in a statement. "But let's be clear. This is not just a victory for the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe, this is a victory for the future of this city, for every person looking for a good job, and for the entire Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Cromwell said the tribe will be back at work on Monday to finalize a compact with the governor on a project Cromwell said will create thousands of jobs and bring in millions in revenue. Patrick has said he expects negotiations on the compact will be completed by the summer deadline.

But opponents worried the project will bring traffic headaches and increased crime to the city of about 55,000. They contended that backers overstated the economic benefits of casino gambling. One major concern is the location of the proposed casino in the East Taunton neighborhood, close to three schools and sensitive environmental areas, said Tony LaCourse, chairman of the anti-casino group Preserve Taunton's Future.

After the vote, LaCourse said he and others individually will continue to push for the interests of the city and to ensure that any downside to the project will be mitigated. He said the group raised about $1,500 and will donate any left over money to the local schools.

The tribe has an option to buy 146 acres in an industrial park at the junction of Routes 24 and 140, where it has proposed a 150,000-square-foot casino. The land will have to be placed in federal trust. Eventually, the tribe expects to add three hotels, retail shops, conference space and a water park.

Under a host community agreement negotiated with Mayor Thomas Hoyer Jr. and approved 6-1 by the City Council, the tribe would make about $33 million in upfront payments to Taunton, including about $15 for traffic improvements. The deal also calls for minimum annual payments of $13 million after the casino begins operations.

Wind River Tribal College grads learn Arapaho

By Martin Reed
The Riverton Ranger

ETHETE, Wyo. (AP) ~ Karen Smith decided to enroll at the Wind River Tribal College in Ethete to learn about the Northern Arapaho's rich culture.

"I started taking Arapaho classes to learn our language. My siblings, we never spoke the language," said Smith, 49, of Ethete.

After taking the college's four Arapaho language classes, Smith said "it's just barely scratching the surface" with her linguistic knowledge.

"I can pray, I have my own prayer. I can introduce myself and it's motivating my other two kids to begin to learn the language also," Smith said.

Smith was one of two Wind River Tribal College's 2012 graduating class members. She and Layha Spoonhunter, 22, earned associates of arts degrees in Arapaho studies during the sixth annual ceremony last month.

The two joined several others who have taken advantage of the tribal college to learn about subjects unique to the institution while fulfilling their desire to gain a higher education.

"I wanted to learn my Arapaho language and my Arapaho culture, and I always wanted to be a student at the tribal college," Spoonhunter said.

Learning about the tribe's history and culture was a priority for him. "It was a chance to go back and kind of reclaim my heritage," he said.

Wind River Tribal College president Marlin Spoonhunter danced in traditional tribal attire before addressing the audience at the graduation ceremony at the Wyoming Indian High School Tech Center.

"I want to thank our two graduates for persevering through a lot of tough times as they pushed forward to obtain their associates of arts degrees," Spoonhunter said.

In the tribal college's short history, there have been people 19 years old who have graduated up to senior citizens, he said.

"It doesn't matter what tribe you are, you're all welcome. It's also open to non-Indians that want to gain knowledge of both worlds," Spoonhunter said.

Layha Spoonhunter before the ceremony began talked about the two worlds: "We have to balance the non-Indian and Indian worlds."

"Even when we gain our education, we must never forget where we came from," he said.

He noted that Lander Valley High School did not teach the Arapaho language. "That kind of motivated me to go to the tribal college to learn the language and the history of the Arapaho people and the Shoshone tribe," he said.

He hopes to serve as a role model "to further educate our youth to be proud of who we are and stay true to who we are."

Spoonhunter credits the tribal college for providing the knowledge he sought. "It's given me new perspectives, new opportunities to learn about different tribes and understand the legal issues tribes face every day," Spoonhunter said.

Wyoming Indian High School graduate Crystal

LeBeau-C'Bearing, who is pursuing three majors at the University of Wyoming, talked about attending the tribal college during her keynote address.

She recalled enrolling in the college with her cousin to take an Arapaho language class. "It was all strictly Arapaho, no English, no writing," she said.

After class she felt amazed at what she had accomplished. "Can you believe we just did that? We spoke a whole hour of Arapaho," she recalled telling her cousin.

The next day her mother went to the language class with her. "It stays with me and I gained a very valuable lesson that anything is possible if you stay with it," she said.

Marlin Spoonhunter spoke highly of the accomplishments of the two graduates.

"Layha did a lot for the college. He went to all of the high schools and he stressed higher education and also stressed health and substance abuse issues" facing the reservation, he said.

Both graduates addressed the audience in Arapaho, thanking those who were important in their success.

"I thank my parents for encouraging me throughout the years to get a higher education," Smith said.

"We are Arapaho. We have a language and culture,"

Layha

Spoonhunter said. "It is our responsibility to pass these ways down to future generations and this higher education is important to pass down to future generations."

Tsyunhehkwa products available at Highway 54 One Stop Store

By Jeff Metoxen
Director Tsyunhehkwa

Tsyunhehkwa (joon-heh-qwa), is a culturally and community based agricultural program of the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin. The title of the program Tsyunhehkwa is from the Oneida language and in a loose translation stands for Life Sustenance. The program consists of two components of Agricultural and Cannery. The Agricultural component is located on a Certified Organic 80-acre site, which provides grass-fed beef, free range poultry, farm fresh eggs and organic produce. The Cannery processes not only Oneida produced products, but items produced in other areas of the Nation and the Community. The program provides you organic white corn products to the community in the form of soup, bread, meal, flour and packaged dehydrated corn. We sell our products at the Retail Store and now at the Oneida One Stop on Highway 54 in Oneida. The community can now purchase the following products at that location: dehydrated white corn, apple sauce, triple berry jam, dill pickles and bread & butter pickles. We hope to see you there. Supplies are limited and seasonal based. We continue to work throughout the Oneida Tribe to find ways to bring our products and services to our Community. We would not have been able to continue working on this project & direction without the help and support of many people and areas of Oneida, which include but not limited to: Oneida One Stop 54, Enterprise, Internal Services Division, Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems, and the many people that work at our Tsyunhehkwa Program! We will continue to work toward improving our services and products. Any questions please let us know. Jeff Metoxen, Director Tsyunhehkwa (920) 869-2141 jmetoxen@oneidation.org

Community Meeting On Housing in Oneida

The Oneida Planning Department is sponsoring a Community Meeting On "Housing" on Thursday, July 5, at 5:00 - 6:00 p.m. in the Little Bear Development Center Conference Room. The purpose of the community meeting is to present the progress of the Housing Comprehensive Plan Element and to gather information from community members about visioning the future of housing development for the Comprehensive Plan Re-write. The Oneida Reservation Comprehensive Plan sets broad policies and guidelines for future growth and development. The plan will serve as the basis for both daily and long-range decisions that will influence the development of the physical, social, political, economie, aesthetic, and other related factors of the community. Below is a schedule for future Comprehensive Plan meetings. The schedule includes the date, time, place, presenters and comprehensive plan topic. Please mark your calendars and plan to attend these and future community meetings so you can voice your vision of the future of our community.

CMN adds Bachelors in Business and Public Administration

KESHENA - The College of Menominee Nation has received approval to add two new degree programs to its academic offering. The majors – a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration and a Bachelor of Arts in Public Administration – were accepted in late May by the College’s accrediting agency as meeting curriculum and other standards. Students may enroll in the programs with the 2012 fall semester, which begins Aug. 20 at the College.

Historically, the College has offered students a number of associate degree programs and technical diplomas. In early 2009, it introduced its first baccalaureate degree in Early Childhood/Elementary Education, a teacher education program recognized by the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction.

The ability to award additional four-year degrees is a major step for the tribal college, says CMN President Verna Fowler. “Our faculty and our students have been urging the College to make this move for some time, and the waiting list of students for these two programs suggests that they will be off to a good start.”

Dr. Fowler notes that the College’s two-year Associate Degree in Business Administration has consistently been among the most popular major, and business graduates account for nearly 20% of all of the College’s alumni. A two-year degree in Public Administration was added to the College’s curriculum in 2008. The Associate Degree programs in both Business and Public Administration will continue to be offered. These will provide students with an educational ladder on which all credits earned in the two-year programs will be applicable to completion of the baccalaureate for students who choose to continue.

“It is a model we use in other programs,” Fowler notes. “It gives our students great flexibility in being able to complete their studies in manageable blocks. If they wish, they can seek entry-level employment immediately after earning the Associate credential, but they are assured that they can easily continue or return later for the Bachelor’s Degree without a loss of credits.”

The 120-credit Business Administration Degree from CMN will present the basic knowledge and problem-solving and critical thinking skills common to most business programs but also address the opportunities and challenges of indigenous communities, tribal enterprises and minority entrepreneurs. Public Administration, a 121-credit major, is designed to prepare graduates for employment in non-profit and community organizations and human services, criminal justice, health services and other public sector settings. A total of 11 faculty and adjunct faculty members will deliver courses on both campuses and in a week-end-only component designed to accommodate working students.

Approval of the programs was granted by the Higher Learning Commission of the Northcentral Association of Colleges and Schools, the regional accrediting agency that reviews all colleges and universities in the upper Midwest.

Students interested in the Bachelor’s Degree programs, or any courses of study at CMN, should apply for admission before the Aug. 3 deadline. Fall semester classes begin on Aug. 20 on both the Keshena campus, N172 State Highway 47/55, and the Green Bay metro area campus, 2733 S. Ridge Road, Green Bay.

Becker Recognized as U.S. Kids Golf Certified Instructor

ATLANTA ~ Mark Becker of Green Bay, WI, has earned the title of Certified Instructor, as announced by U.S. Kids Golf.

Becker has been a junior golf instructor for 16 years and is currently The PGA Director of Golf at Thornberry Creek at Oneida, where he has been for eight years.

"Watching kids grow up learning the game, to appreciate the game and learn life lessons along the way, is amazing," Becker said, "I am very happy and fortunate to have the privilege to share this game with them." A U.S. Kids Golf Certified Instructor has received extensive training in teaching golf to kids ages 12 and under. Each instructor will provide a high-quality and fun experience that features game-based learning methods and a willingness to engage parents.

"Parents of young golfers can expect that a Certified Instructor will bring great enthusiasm to instruction," said Dan Van Horn, President/CEO of U.S. Kids Golf. "They understand that kids learn best while having fun." The Certified Instructor program was
