Construction, roundabouts greet powwow traffic

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

The road to the 40th annual Oneida Powwow may be highlighted by orange cones and heavy construction equipment.

Travelers from all directions will encounter construction activity as major roads such as Highway 29 and 41 are undergoing work. Drivers utilizing I-43 will encounter roadwork on the Leo Frigo Bridge east of Oneida. Drivers entering the area using Highway 29 will see numerous shoulder and lane closures west and eastbound. Travelers using Highway 41 will encounter construction on 14 miles of the highway in Brown County with the exit to Highway 54 being closed.

The biggest wrench for powwow travelers may be work being done on Highway 54 in Oneida.

The installation of a new bridge over Duck Creek, wider lanes along with roundabouts has caused traffic delays in the Oneida area. The stoplights at the intersection of Seminary Road and Highway 54 have been removed and replaced with a four-way stop. The north leg of Seminary road will be closed until mid-September. During the work Highway 54 will remain open until completion in November.

With construction work comes the need for driver patience.

"First of all slow down," said Wisconsin Department of Transportation

The Oneida Police Department will direct traffic during peak times at the intersection of Hwy. 54 and Seminary Road during the powwow.

Getting ready for the 40th Annual Oneida Powwow

Department of Public Works employees updated the electrical boxes while others set up tents for the 40th Annual Oneida Powwow.

Kalihwisaks

Preparations are underway for the 40th annual Oneida Powwow being held Friday, June 29 to Sunday, July 1. Oneida Department of Public Works employees were out updating the electrical boxes while other workers set up shade tents around the dance grounds behind the Norbert Hill Center (NHC).

According to Pow Wow Committee Vice-Chairwoman Tonya Webster, there will be some new items like a southern style dance category for adults and a father-daughter special, along with a lot of old favorites.

"It's still the same concept, it's just gotten bigger over the years," she said.

Before the powwow, the Woodland Indians Art Show will be at 5:00pm in the NHC. Li' Miss Oneida will be selected at a pageant starting at 5:30pm on the dance grounds. Grand Entry begins at 7:00pm. See page 9B for more Oneida Cultural events.

Tribes start receiving settlement money

HELENA, Mont. (AP) – Some Indian tribes have started receiving their shares of a $1 billion settlement with the U.S. government over mismanagement of their money and trust lands, while others are waiting and remain undecided on what to do with their windfall.

The agreement between the government and 44 tribes across the nation was announced in March to settle claims of money lost in mismanaged accounts and royalties from natural resource development.

The tribes sued in an attempt to receive an accounting of the Interior Department's management of the trust funds and to learn how much had been lost.

Their claims dealt with tribal trust funds and not individual trust funds, which is addressed in the $3.4 billion class-action settlement led by Elouise Cobell, the Blackfeet woman who died last year.

Blackfeet chairman T.J. Show said that tribal leaders will soon distribute $9 million of the $19 million his tribe is due to receive. That's about $550 per person, which Show said will help residents on a reservation where the unemployment rate is between 70 and 80 percent.

"I believe it will be an economic benefit to the tribal members to use as they see fit, whether it be for college kids going to school or parents just needing to feed their child," Show said.

The other $10 million has been earmarked for investment in projects such as a 90-room hotel to be built on the reservation, Show said. The Great Falls Tribune first reported the Blackfeet tribe's plans to disburse the settlement money.

Ganka says onaki?wah to Oneida Nation High School

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Oneida Nation High School (ONHS) Principle Bob Ganka is retiring June 28 after eight-and-a-half years of heading the high school, making his time in office the longest of all the ONHS principles. Ganka stated his long tenure helped build trust with the students, staff and community.

"We needed structure, we needed organization, and stability and those are the things that I brought by the fact that I've been here for a while. There's been continuity, kids know what to expect," said Ganka. "I've seen a lot of change in our kids. I think we have a more clear understanding of what our mission is. I built a sense of trust with the kids which seems to take a long time, and takes a long time to get a sense of trust with the adults in the community. Once they realize you're here and you do what you say and say what you do, then it seems to come together, but it takes some time to build that trust. I think our kids are more responsive now. I think our curriculum is better, I think our staff is better."

Ganka is proud of the reading program he implemented in response to test scores that indicated it was a problem area.

"I just didn't think our Community discussion meetings

The Oneida Business Committee held community discussion meetings for the July 2 General Tribal Council meeting. Two meetings will be held Thursday, June 28: Norbert Hill Center, 10:00am to 12:00pm, and Social Services Community Room, 6:00pm to 8:00pm. Above: Brenda John-Stevens hands out information.

(WisDOT) Regional Communications Manager Kim Rudat. "Follow the signs, be alert and leave distance between you and the vehicle in front of you."

Increased traffic along with construction may lead to bottlenecks but the Oneida Police Department will be visible to ensure the safety of drivers.

"We will be patrolling all of the construction sites to ensure the safe travels of all. Parking will not be allowed in the construction zones," said OPD Police Chief Rich VanBoxtel. "We will be monitoring the traffic flow during the busy times and direct traffic as needed."

New roundabouts in the area have been completed and may be a new experience for some powwow goers. The WisDOT offers roundabout navigation tips.

Approach and entry

- Choose the proper lane for multi-lane approach roadways. Slow down and yield to pedestrians in the crosswalk.
- Look to the left. Traffic in the roundabout has the right of way.
- Approach the yield line and enter the roundabout when there is an adequate gap in the circulating traffic flow.
- If another car is waiting at the yield line ahead of you, do not stop in the crosswalk. Keep the crosswalk clear for pedestrians.
- Bicyclists are permitted to ride within the roundabout. Please share the road and do not pass a bicycle in the roundabout.

Exiting the roundabout

- Once you have entered the roundabout, proceed counter-clockwise to your exit. You now have the right of way.
- As you approach your exit, turn on your right turn signal.
- Exit the roundabout, yielding to pedestrians in the crosswalk.

Above all, VanBoxtel recommends following traffic laws and take your time to ensure safe travel.

"Slow down and leave space between you and the vehicle in front of you. The roadways will not be ideal, but it will be open. With the large concentration of folks that are trying to get to the powwow grounds, the area will be congested and they are narrow. Use an alternate route if possible. Our main concern is the safety of our community," he said.

From 1A/Ganka says onaki?wah reading scores were where they should be. We had a lot of data, and we didn't really use the data that well. I think we're using the data now to drive the curriculum.

Our reading scores are going up, and it's just because we practice it, we've made it a point of emphasis," he said.

Ganka noted some contrasts within the school. He stated its weakness is that it's a small school, approximately 75 students, but its strength is it's a small school where students can get individual attention. The Class of 2012 consisted of 19 seniors, yet nearly 400 people attended the graduation ceremony, a testament to the support Thunderhawks receive from the community. He advises the future principle to keep the community in mind when tackling issues.

"I think that's going to be important for the new person, whoever who he or she might be, is to listen to the needs of the community and realize the role that the school plays within the community, and help the school to grow," he said.

Ganka said he enjoyed his time as principle and learning about Oneida culture and history.

"I'll miss the kids the most. That interaction with kids keeps you going. Some kids have a real difficult time; it's very rewarding to see a kid do something right because ... you helped him realize there's another way," he said.

CLARIFICATION

In the story "Pending repairs force indefinite closing of Holy Apostles Church building" on the cover of the June 21 Kalihwisaks, it was reported that funding for the repairs would be through the Diocese in Fond du Lac. Rather, the funding for the repairs will be through the Davis Trust if approved by Bishop Jacobus in his capacity as Trustee. The Davis Trust was established from a bequest of J. Howard Davis and Mildred S. Davis on their deaths for use by the Church of the Holy Apostles for its ministry among the Oneida Tribe of Wisconsin. Information received was not clearly explained at press time. The Kalihwisaks apologizes for the inconvenience.

Ongoing Kalihwisaks Column • Providing a connection to the past and was always jumpy and ready to run when surprised by loud engines and machinery. I first drove this team when hitched to a wagon to load hay. At first, we loaded loose hay with three-tine forks. Later, we put the hay in windrows with a dump rake (also pulled by the horses) and picked up the row with a hay loader hitched to the hay wagon. This team pulled every kind of machinery: plows, spring-tooth, riding cultivator, mower, and grain and corn binders. They also pulled the heavy duty rope on a series of blocks and tackles hitched to the hay fork to lift the hay from the loaded wagon to the track in the hay loft where the hay was dropped with a smaller trip rope. I drove this team for every kind of work. My hands and fingers were always calloused.

Machinery always needed to be fixed. The mower and grain binder had sickle bars on them with individual blades affixed along the length of the bar. When the blades were broken or worn out, they needed to be replaced. They were held in place with two rivets. The rivets had to be punched out. A new blade was riveted in its place by pounding the rivets sufficiently flat to avoid hitting the guard teeth. The sickles were powered by a pitman rod when the machine was pulled forward. The mower sickle could be taken out of gear when not cutting hay. Sometimes the pitman rod broke and had to be replaced. The binder had canvases attached to long thin wooden slats. The slats often came off and the canvas wore out with use. There is a knotter on the grain binder that ties a knot in the binder twine to secure each bundle of grain. Again wear and tear on the knotter meant getting a new piece.

Teeth on the spring-tooth, cultivators and riding cultivator became round with use instead of sharp and pointed to do a good job. The teeth on the riding cultivator were affixed by two bolts, which when removed, allowed the teeth to be turned upside down, so the reverse sharp points would be utilized. When they, too, wore down, they were taken off the machine, fired up in the small forge we had, and pounded on the anvil into a point again. This could occur just so many times and then it was time to buy new teeth.

Dad sent me down to a lower corn field near Duck Creek on the Nick Bronz farm (later belonging to the Tony Van Schyndel family). The corn was tall and heavy and the chain links that fed the cut corn out kept breaking. There is a small tool box on the reach with a few tools and some extra links in it. I had to unhitch the horses a few times so I could replace broken links. The replacements had to be pounded into place.

Every machine required complete oiling and greasing before starting out for the field. Oil was administered on various moving parts with an oil squirt can. Grease was taken out of the container with a wooden stick or paddle and put into the grease cups. Lubrication is key when operating machinery, especially in hot dry weather and when sand and dirt could get into the bearings or gears. Of course, doing this allowed the machinery to run easier and prevented unnecessary wear.

Dad knew how to splice rope to make a longer rope or to put pieces of rope back together. He couldn't manage the procedure, but he could show me how to do it. He also showed me how to tie a simple square knot, double bolands and many others. Horse harnesses are made of thick leather. They can be fancy with brass fittings and hames and ivory rings for the reins or they could be quite plain. Either way straps or reins may break. Then they were often riveted together with a hollow rivet put in a device with a handle to mash the rivet so it split in all directions after it went through two layers of harness. The black rivets came in two sizes: short and long. (More to come)

Note: Some of the words I used in this column are not in the dictionary, such as knotter and double bolands, but they were quite common when I was growing up, so I used them. Also, on occasion, I feel like I'm writing a manual for the Amish Community. They may not appreciate my reference to them, but I admire their way of life, especially their very good food.

Bio: Raised on a farm in Oneida. Graduated Seymour High School, 1950, Ex Airborne Radar Technician, USAF during Korean War; Mother of six children and seven stepchildren, widow of Floyd Metoxen, Historian - 15 years, on Business Committee from 1967 to 1996.

I am the oldest of six siblings. Sister Shirley is next and two years younger. Then, in order, are Kenneth, Patricia, Jerry and Linda. Dad lost his right arm at Hobergs Paper Mill on May 13, 1941. He was hospitalized for a month. On my ninth birthday, June 8, I went to St. Vincent's Hospital to visit him. The farm, machinery and animals were purchased with his settlement money from the Wisconsin Industrial Commission.

One of the first things I learned to do was milk cows. This is a chore needing to be done every day of the year, once in the early morning, and again before supper time in the evening. In order for the cows to be contented and produce the maximum amount of milk, they need to be provided with hay, grain and silage and have access to plenty of water at all times. We did not have electricity, so we had to pump the water by hand and haul it to the barn from the pump shed. The process was to place a wash tub between two cows and fill it with buckets of water. When they drank as much as they wanted, we dragged the tub in the manger over to the next two cows.

Dad purchased a big team of dapple gray horses called Cap (for Captain) and Colonel. They weighed 2200 pounds each (a long ton). Cap was gentle and easy going. Colonel was a little high strung. They were involved in an accident in front of a freight train when first acquired. Colonel never forgot that

Oneida Tribal Judicial System

Newly Elected Oneida Judicial Officers

By Janice L. McLeester

Chief Judicial Officer, Oneida Tribal Judicial System

The purpose of this article is to answer questions individuals may have in regard to their role as a Judicial Officer and the time commitments required within this position. This information is intended to provide a good understanding of the position's expectations.

Prior to being elected, a background check will be completed. As a member of the judiciary, you cannot have been convicted of a felony, nor been removed from any tribal board, committee or commission. Once you are elected to the position you can no longer sit on any tribal board, committee or commission. This rule is in place to minimize conflicts of interests. Many of the cases filed at the judiciary involve decisions made within the tribe's system. Being on a board, committee or commission outside the Oneida Tribe is acceptable, however requires disclosure to the Oneida Tribal Judicial System.

There are eleven (11) Judicial Officers. Elections are staggered, with eight (8) Judicial Officers having four (4) year terms and three (3) Judicial Officers three (3) year terms. The July 7, 2012 election will be for three (3) seats on the Judiciary with three (3) year terms. The remaining eight (8) Judicial Officer positions will not be up for election until 2015.

Will I be a full-time or part-time Judicial Officer?

The three seats of the July 7, 2012 election are for part-time positions.

Will I receive any training on the Judiciary prior to sitting on any cases?

The judicial system has a guiding document that sets forth its training expectations for its Judicial Officers. Judicial Officers must attend training as outlined in Oneida Tribal Judicial System's Comprehensive Training Plan. Some of the training offered will be conducted at the National Judicial College in Reno, NV with courses ranging from one (1) week to two (2) weeks. Two (2) week courses run continuously. The National Judicial College is an internationally recognized college in training judges and other court personnel. Note: You will be required to utilize your personal or vacation time if you are a tribal employee.

Required training consists of Jurisdiction, Essential Skills for Judges, Administrative Law, Federal Indian Law, Conducting the Trial, Rules of Evidence and Decision Writing.

Other training presenters such as Falmouth Institute, National Indian Justice Center, Wisconsin's Judicial College and Wisconsin Tribal Judges Association, provide excellent training opportunities.

Which part of the Judiciary will I be on Trial or Appellate?

Newly elected Judicial Officers will begin their term serving on the Trial Court. This is done to familiarize the Judicial Officer with the operation of the court setting. As part of the training, you will have an opportunity to audit trial court proceedings and learn the administrative functions of the clerk of courts.

What time commitments are required?

Trials/hearings are held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with the majority being held on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning at 9:00A.M. and continue throughout the day, with the last scheduled trial at 3:00P.M. Judicial Officers are required to be in deliberation prior to the trial/hearing beginning at 8:00A.M.

Oneida Tribal employees are required to obtain prior approval from their supervisors for any time away from your regular positions within the tribe in order to sit on a judiciary panel during regular work hours in order to fulfill judicial responsibilities.

OBC Forum...

This month has been busy as we continue to wrestle with the fact that we are still working on balancing the budget for the next fiscal year. A large multi-million dollar shortage is forecasted which at one point was in excess of $24 million dollars.

We need to think about some of the economic pressures which are wearing us down. There are some heavy issues here, from over-staffing to the continued need for us to seek out ways to grow top-end revenues. To this end, I have begun work on a comprehensive report to the Oneida Business Committee (OBC) which is associated with my assigned duties on economic diversification, commerce code designs and regulatory promulgations matters. Last week, I reached out to the tribal financial staff and the OBC to seek some input and assistance from these collective areas for inclusion in the report.

In the report as I move forward, I will necessarily note some very honest points. I will note how we are off track economically and how we need to re-shuffle the deck.

In the balance of this article are some excerpts from a memo I released on June 18, 2012. My memo was designed to elicit feedback from financial staff and the OBC as I begin some of my work around commerce and economic diversification:

As you're all aware, we previously enjoyed record double-digit economic growth from 1998 through 2007; today we are in a very sluggish economic environment. At risk is our long term financial health as a tribe, we need solutions now!

In my report, it will be important to note, Oneida finds itself in a very tough economic position and I want to spell out some of these perspectives and highlight prime examples.

Some of the areas where I would like your intellectual assistance and technical feedback for the report are as follows:

- 1) Current economic conditions.
- 2) Breaking point. At what point will we collapse financially if we continue to make no changes? For example, what is the actual number of employees the Tribe is recommended to have on its payroll? I understand this number was projected at approximately 2,500 a few years ago.

Vince DeLaRosa
Councilman

- 3) Past economic failures.
 - a) How do we prevent past economic failures from occurring again in the future?
 - b) Is there a better model to consider as we move forward?
- 4) Explanation for the need to grow top end revenues.
- 5) Budget deficits. Budget deficits create an environment where all we can do is barely survive by just making the grade.

We have been operating under massive budget deficits for several years. This is not a good path and I am requesting we spell out in more detail the harm of operating under looming and yearly budget deficits.

- 6) A new model for public / private partnerships.
- 7) Commerce ideas or concepts which should be considered.
- 8) Economic growth and long-term sustainability. How are things so different here in terms of governmental economic growth and long-term sustainability?
- 9) Government businesses.
- 10) Budget Management Act. I am working on a Budget

Management Act and am requesting feedback on the components you feel should be covered. What are some of the ideas and concepts you envision in this type of legislation to streamline our budget processes?

I would note, I have a training and housing development program which I want to bring forward in the next few weeks. I am hoping that we can merge this program with NWTC credit programs. I will release this suggested program in late July of this year.

Thanks for your attention to this report. If you have any question, please feel free to contact my office at 920-869-4426.

Respectively,
Vince DeLaRosa

Letters & Opinions...

Raising the standard of ethics and morale

Although I am not aboriginal to this community, it is to my inclination that all individuals, tribal members in particular be up held of their integrity. I am truly honored to be a member of this "great nation", that is "The People of Standing Stone", I see a need for improvement and the time has beckoned. I have always sought to "pay tribute to my nation through hard work and dedication", however, it seems many are still quite inept. I have always been adamantly striven to promote cohesiveness, combat dissonance, while exemplifying the positions I have held. The question I have consistently asked is "why are the ethics and morale so desolate?"

During my tenure at the "Oneida Casino", I have been subject to vast mutiny, examples include: workplace hostility, harassment, and intimidation. Most imperatively, circumvention has become quite rampant, this can be eradicated through ample facets of communication. It seems everyone is off on a tangent, which attributes to greater ambiguity, thus impacting productivity, as well as efficiency. If no affirmative is taken, the rights of many employees will continue to be infringed upon. How ironic that we have a credo of ethics which is to do the right thing for the right reasons. This is all futile if fallen on deaf ears, such as the case for those of whom are wrongfully terminated.

For years I have surmised, commensurate wages, benefits would suffice however the morale and ethics, not just in gaming but tribal wide are need of bolstering, and obligation I will always strive ascertain as a member of this great nation! This can only be feasible if we allow those tact and prudence to thrive, hence exuberance should permeate! Embrace diversity!

I wish to be employed nowhere other then for "People of the Standing Stone", if afforded the opportunity, we can all ascend to new plateaus! For my life encompasses not only me but also society in general.

Conclusively, I am asking for an apology from personnel at the Main Casino in the Vault third shift, for if they had humbled themselves, allowed me to exemplify my position, had faith in my work, it would have been a winning experience for everyone. I would also like to say hello and I love you to four of the most extraordinary individuals I have ever known, that being a beautiful young lady and her three boys. All gaming employees will always be like family!

Emergency cooling shelter

A recent heat wave has opened the doors of the Oneida VFW as an emergency cooling shelter for community members needing a break from the heat.

By Nate Wisneski

Kalihwisaks

With temperatures expected to reach the mid 90's over the next few days officials have opened the doors of the Oneida VFW as an emergency cooling shelter.

The VFW will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The VFW is located at 2980 E. Service Road.

The best defense to heat related illness is prevention. Here are some tips:

- Drink more fluids (nonalcoholic), regardless of your activity level. Don't wait until you're thirsty to drink. Warning: If your doctor generally limits the amount of fluid you drink or has you on water pills, ask him how much you should drink while the weather is hot.

- Don't drink liquids that contain alcohol or large amounts of sugar—these actually cause you to lose more body fluid. Also, avoid very cold drinks, because they can cause stomach cramps.
- Stay indoors and, if at all possible, stay in an air-conditioned place. If your home does not have air conditioning, go to the shopping mall or public library—even a few hours spent in air conditioning can help your body stay cooler when you go back into the heat. Call your local health department to see if there are any heat-relief shelters in your area.
- Electric fans may provide comfort, but when the temperature is in the high 90s, fans will not prevent heat-related illness. Taking a cool shower or bath, or moving to an air-conditioned place is a much better way to cool off.

- Wear lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing.
- Never leave anyone in a closed, parked vehicle.
- Although any one at any time can suffer from heat-related illness, some people are at greater risk than others. Check regularly on, infants and young children along with people aged 65 or older.
- Cut down on exercise. If you must exercise, drink two to four glasses of cool, nonalcoholic fluids each hour.

Walker: Wis. Won't act on health care ruling

By Scott Bauer

Associated Press
MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Regardless of the outcome of the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling on President Barack Obama's health care overhaul law, Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker has vowed not to do anything until after the November election.

Walker, an outspoken critic of the law, originally said in January that he would not begin setting up the state's health insurance exchange required by the law until after the court ruled. Earlier this month, the Republican governor went even further, saying that if the law is upheld he will not do anything until after the election, hoping that the next president and Congress will repeal it.

Only after those two fail would Wisconsin "figure out some alternative within the state," Walker said in a statement released by his office this week. Republican state lawmakers appear to be on board with that approach, even while Democrats and health care advocates say the state should be more bullish in moving forward with consumer protections and other reforms under the law.

The law would provide health care to about 30 million uninsured people and make coverage more affordable to millions of others by expanding the reach of Medicaid, forbid insurance companies from refusing coverage to people with pre-existing illnesses and creating new subsidies. Officially known as the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, the law is called "Obamacare" by opponents, including Walker.

The Supreme Court, expected to rule on the law Thursday, could allow it to remain or strike down all or part of it. But the ruling is likely to signal only the next stage of the debate, not settle the issue, especially in states such as Wisconsin where Republicans control the governor's office and legislature. Walker's decision to wait until after the November election before doing anything makes sense, said state Assembly Health Committee Chairman Rep. Jeff Stone, R-Greendale.

"There's no way we're going to do anything between now and the elections anyway on this topic," Stone said. "We owe it to business in this state, and our own economy, to have some clear direction."

One of Walker's first actions on the day he took office in January 2011 was to authorize Republican Attorney General J.B. Van Hollen to join the multistate lawsuit trying to block the law, which Congress passed in 2010.

"He's on the far end of the spectrum in terms of trying to block the law and doing nothing to prepare for it," said Robert Kraig, executive director of Citizen Action of Wisconsin, a health care advocacy group that supports the law and expanding health insurance coverage.

Even if the court does as many predict and strikes down the mandate that everyone have health insurance, Kraig said other important changes, including the expansion of Medicaid and allowing young adults up to age 26 to remain on their parents plans, could remain.

"Wisconsin needs to be in position to take full advantage of this law," he said. State Rep. Jon Richards, the ranking Democrat on the Assembly Health Committee, said it's a big mistake not for Wisconsin to move forward with implementing the health insurance exchange and other parts of the federal law.

"Wisconsin should be in charge of our own destiny with health care and the consumers in Wisconsin should get the benefits of the law no matter what happens in Washington," Richards said.

Wisconsin, like many states, has done nothing to set up a health insurance exchange through which residents could choose among different plans to buy private insurance with taxpayer-provided assistance to cover the cost of premiums. The exchanges are designed to increase competition by requiring insurers to offer more plans and provide more information.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has set a Nov. 16 deadline for states to submit plans for their health insurance exchanges, which must be in place by 2014. The federal government would step in and run exchanges in states that don't have them.

Richards and Democratic state Sen. Jon Erpenbach introduced a bill last year, supported by a host of consumer advocacy groups, that would have put major parts of the federal overhaul into state law, including the ban on denying coverage due to a pre-existing condition and removing annual and lifetime benefit caps.

The proposal went nowhere in the Republican-controlled Legislature.

Richards said it's frustrating that the Walker administration has been blocking the changes and "frittered away" the opportunity to be proactive.

"It's about political posturing," Richards said.

Wisconsin has relatively few people without insurance coverage, thanks its popular BadgerCare programs that began under welfare reforms enacted by Republican Gov. Tommy Thompson in the late 1990s. The programs were expanded under Democratic Gov. Jim Doyle, but Walker scaled them back amid skyrocketing demand and state budget troubles.

Based on 2010 U.S. Census Bureau data, 90.6 percent people in Wisconsin had insurance coverage. That tied with Maine for the third-highest rate of any state, after Hawaii at 92.3 percent and Massachusetts at 94.4 percent.

A spokeswoman for Walker's Department of Health Services emphasized that Wisconsin was able to reach a high level of coverage without a federal mandate.

NYC sues Seneca cigarette dealer

By David B. Caruso

Associated Press
NEW YORK ~ The City of New York filed a lawsuit Wednesday against a cigarette dealer on an Indian reservation in western New York, claiming that the business has been flouting state and federal law by shipping thousands of packs into the city without paying state or local taxes or verifying the age of the buyer.

The suit, filed in a federal court in Manhattan, targets Robert and Marcia Gordon, members of the Seneca tribe who were outspoken opponents of attempts by state and federal authorities to rein in the sale of untaxed cigarettes from reservations.

It accused the couple's Salamanca-based business of blatantly ignoring state laws requiring that taxes be paid on any cigarettes shipped off a reservation to people who aren't members of a tribe.

An official with the New York City Sheriff's office confirmed the company's defiance of the law through a simple sting this spring, the suit said. In April, an investigator went on the couple's website, allofourbutts.com, and placed an order for 400 cigarettes at a cost of $30, plus $20 for shipping.

The cigarettes arrived a month later as promised, and were signed for by an office clerk. The suit said the delivery driver didn't seek to verify the age of the person receiving the order, the cigarettes didn't carry the surgeon general's required health warnings and no taxes were collected. City lawyers said in the suit that they believed that thousands of similar sales had taken place, costing the city substantial tax revenue.

Reached by telephone Wednesday, Marcia Gordon said she hadn't seen the lawsuit yet, but was sure nothing the business was doing was illegal. She declined further comment.

Gordon and her husband have made no secret of their company's operations, and have repeatedly argued in court that, as members of the Seneca tribe, they are exempt from certain state taxes.

The couple went to court in 2010 in an attempt to prevent enforcement of the federal Prevent All Cigarette Trafficking Act, a new law that banned the sale of cigarettes through the U.S. mail. They said the law had decimated their business, which, at its peak, was selling $2 million-worth of cigarettes each month.

Last December, they persuaded a federal court to temporarily block enforcement of a part of the law requiring dealers shipping through private delivery services to pay any applicable state and local taxes in advance. That suit is still pending.

New York City's Law Department argued in the suit that the couple's involvement in that legal challenge indicated that they were fully aware of their responsibilities under the law. The suit said the business' willful defiance of the law amounted to civil racketeering.

"The City has made clear through our previous lawsuits that illegal sales of cigarettes will not be tolerated in any form," the city's chief lawyer, Corporation Counsel Michael A. Cardozo, said in a statement. "Businesses that flout the law injure the public health and evade taxes used to pay for vital public services. They can expect future enforcement actions directed against them."

American Indian museum eatery wins DC food prize

WASHINGTON (AP) ~ The restaurant at the Smithsonian's National Museum of the American Indian has won a new distinction among Washington eateries.

On Sunday night, Mitsitam (mitt-SEE-tom) Native Foods Cafe won a Rammy Award from the Restaurant Association of Metropolitan Washington. It was named "Casual Restaurant of the Year."

Mitsitam is the first museum restaurant to be nominated for a Rammy Award. Mitsitam was competing with Bar Pilar, C.F. Folks, Hank's Oyster Bar and Room 11.

The museum eatery has a rotating menu of foods that have been grown, raised and harvested in North and South America for thousands of years, from Peruvian ceviche to pork tacos.

Last week, Mitsitam unveiled its summer menu featuring crispy rabbit, grilled sweet corn, purple potato soup, and other items.

Bus line expands service for Mich., Ill., Wis.

CHARLEVOIX, Mich. (AP) ~ A bus service is expanding in Michigan's northern Lower Peninsula to connect with several other Michigan cities as well as Illinois and Wisconsin.

The Petoskey News-Review reports Indian Trails service is scheduled to begin Aug. 1 in Charlevoix. The stop will be near the dock for the ferry to Beaver Island.

One route will take passengers north to Petoskey, across Michigan's Upper Peninsula and to Milwaukee, while another will go south to Traverse City, Grand Rapids and Chicago.

Stops on both routes offer an opportunity to connect with Amtrak passenger trains.

Head of Bureau of Indian Education resigning

WASHINGTON (AP) ~ The director of the Bureau of Indian Education is resigning to take a position in his home state of South Dakota.

Secretary of the Interior Ken Salazar announced Wednesday that Keith Moore is leaving the BIE to serve as state director for the Fellowship of Christian Athletes in South Dakota. Moore, an enrolled member of the Rosebud Sioux Tribe in South Dakota, has led the Bureau for the past two years. He was selected for the position by then-Assistant Secretary of Indian Affairs Larry Echo Hawk.

BIE Chief of Staff Brian Drapeaux will serve as acting director until a replacement is named.

The BIE operates the federal school system for Native American students. It oversees more than 180 facilities on 64 reservations in 23 states.

Tribes work for record Native American vote

The head of the largest group representing Native Americans and Alaska Natives said federal and state governments should provide voter registration at Indian Health Service facilities.

Jefferson Keel, president of the National Congress of American Indians, said in a phone interview Tuesday with The Associated Press that the health facilities should be designated voter registration sites in the same way state-based public assistance agencies are under the National Voter Registration Act. He said the facilities are ideal for voter registration because they're in many tribal communities.

"Not all Native Americans are registered, and that's one of the things we are pushing for this year is to turn out the largest Native vote in history," Keel said.

Indian Health Service spokeswoman Dianne

Dawson, reached late Tuesday evening, said the agency had no comment at this time.

Only two of every five American Indians and Alaska Natives who are eligible to vote were registered in 2008, Keel told a gathering of tribal leaders Monday at the opening of the midyear meeting of the National Congress of American Indians in Lincoln, Neb. He said an estimated 1 million Native Americans and Alaska

Natives who are eligible to vote are not registered.

"This should be considered a civic emergency," Keel said.

Keel said the voter registration and turnout work is not intended to be partisan, but American Indians have made significant gains under the current administration and tribes want to protect their resources and sovereignty.

Medical College trustees approve 2 campuses

MILWAUKEE (AP) ~ Medical College of Wisconsin trustees have voted to move ahead with establishing two community-based medical education campuses in Wisconsin.

The campuses will be located in Green Bay and central Wisconsin. The Medical College has a goal of admitting its first group of students in the summer of 2015.

Regional health systems, academic institutions and civic and business leaders in Green Bay and central Wisconsin will partner with the Medical College in developing the campuses. The college says a key to the success of the campuses is the commitment of the regional health systems to create residency programs.

The cost of creating the campuses is about $23 million. College spokeswoman Maureen Mack says the specific central Wisconsin site has not yet been determined.

New community technology center opens at CMN

KESHENA - The Community Technology Center on the Keshena campus of the College of Menominee Nation will launch operations on Monday, June 25, with high-speed internet access for people living in local and surrounding communities. The new facility is located on the College campus at N172 State Highway 47-55 in Keshena.

The center will provide the general public with internet access, on-site use of computer equipment, and a variety of learning opportunities. Programs at the center will include technology-based community education and critically needed community support and job training. This project is made possible through funding received by the College of Menominee Nation from the Broadband Technologies Opportunity Program (BTOP), a Federal initiative under the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA). The initiative is designed to increase broadband access and use by under-served populations in areas with limited internet availability.

Beginning on June 25, the Community Technology Center will open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. seven days a week for walk-in users and program participants. Patrons will find the following technology-based activities offered concurrently:

- Open Lab for general public use.
- Workshops to meet the needs of all people—regardless of ability or need

- Skill building activities including GED, math, reading, and career exploration and placement.
- Certificate/technical diploma job training (using technology equipment).

We will kick off the summer schedule with a Broadband Summer Blast of Activities. Join the fun and earn participation rewards such as iPods, tablets, and eReaders. Stop in to get started earning these rewards.

Orientations and tours are being scheduled throughout the first couple weeks. Call the Community Technology Center at 715-799-6226, ext. 3300 to reserve a spot.

Coming This Summer to the CEC – Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop

If you like to play video games, you might already be thinking about creating your own games someday. Maybe you have an idea for a great storyline, great characters, or maybe ideas for how things should work. Don't wait until "someday" to create your own game – take the Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop at the CEC and learn to create video games right now!

Microsoft Kodu is easy to use game design software that already has built-in characters and actions and the ability to create complex landscapes for the action to take place in. No computer programming skills are necessary, because the games are created using graphical "building block" commands instead of code. You won't be ready to design the next Halo or Zelda game when we're done, but you will have a good idea of the elements that go into a video game, and how to make them work for you!

The 2-day Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop for Youth and Adults will be held at the Oneida Nation Community Education Center on Monday and Tuesday, July 9 – 10, from 1:00 – 4:00 PM.

Then use your newly developed programming skills some more by taking the Lego Logo Robotics Workshop and learning to create and program robots made from Legos!

Coming This Summer to the CEC – Lego Logo Robotics Workshop

The Lego Logo Robotics Workshop will let participants build with Legos, and then show them how to use the Logo easy-to-learn computer programming language to make their creations to come to life! It's Alive! Bwa-ha-ha-ha! Schools and colleges have been using Lego Logo Robotics for years to introduce beginners to computer programming, and now it's coming to this easy and fun workshop at the CEC! This workshop is also a good follow-up to the Microsoft Kodu Game Design Workshop. The Lego Logo Robotics Workshop will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, July 11 – 12, from 1:00 – 4:00 pm at the Oneida Nation Community Education Center.

Declare Independence from Foodborne Illness this Fourth of July

WASHINGTON— When celebrating our nation's independence this Fourth of July, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) reminds Americans that proper food handling practices can prevent their "Life, Liberty, and pursuit of Happiness" from being threatened by foodborne illness. The warm temperatures that draw crowds of people to outdoor celebrations also encourage the growth of bacteria, and incidents of food-related illnesses rise in summer months. But four simple steps—Clean, Separate, Cook, and Chill—can help families declare freedom from foodborne illness at Independence Day celebrations.

"We want to provide families with important information that will help reduce the risk of foodborne illness during their Fourth of July celebrations," USDA Under Secretary for Food Safety Dr. Elisabeth Hagen said. "Small children and the elderly are among the most vulnerable to foodborne illness, and this information is essential in protecting loved ones at family barbecues and picnics."

In time for the Fourth of July holiday, FSIS has created a new infographic in partnership with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Ad Council featuring food safety tips from the Founding Fathers. The infographic, fact sheets, videos and podcasts about safe food handling and preparation in warmer months can be found on FSIS' "Grill It Safe" webpage at www.fsis.usda.gov/Food_Safety_Education/Grill_It_Safe.

Additionally, representatives from FSIS' Meat and Poultry Hotline will answer consumer questions in English and Spanish from the Twitter handles @USDAFoodSafety and @USDAFoodSafe_es on June 28 at 1 p.m. ET.

Clean

Freedom from foodborne illnesses starts with clean surfaces and clean hands. Be sure that you and your guests wash your hands before preparing or handling food. Hands should be washed with soap and warm water for 20 seconds before and after handling food. Equally important is making sure that the surfaces that come in contact with raw and cooked foods are clean before you start and are washed frequently.

Separate

Raw meats and poultry should be prepared separately from vegetables and cooked foods. As you chop meats and veggies, be sure to use separate cutting boards. Juices from raw meats can contain harmful bacteria that could spread to raw veggies and already cooked foods.

As you take the cooked meats off the grill, be sure to place them on a clean platter, not on the dish that held them when they were raw. The juices left on the plate from raw meat can spread bacteria to safely cooked food.

Cook

Never begin cooking without your most important tool—a food thermometer. Color is not a reliable indicator of doneness. Meat and poultry cooked on a grill often brown quickly and may appear done on the outside, but still may not have reached a safe minimum internal temperature to kill any harmful bacteria. Whole cuts of pork, lamb, veal, and beef should be cooked to 145 °F as measured by a food thermometer placed in the thickest part of the meat, followed by a three-minute rest time before carving or consuming. Hamburgers and other ground beef should reach 160 °F. All poultry should reach a minimum temperature of 165 °F. Fish should be cooked to 145 °F. Fully cooked meats like hot dogs should be grilled to 165 °F or until steaming hot.

If you are smoking meats, the temperature in the smoker should be maintained between 225 °F and 300 °F for safety. Be sure to use your food thermometer to be certain the food has reached a safe minimum internal temperature.

Chill

Keeping food at a safe temperature can be a concern at outdoor picnics and cookouts. Too often, food is prepared and left to sit out while guests munch over the course of several hours. Bacteria grow most rapidly between 40 °F and 140 °F, so perishable food should never sit out for more than two hours. If the temperature is higher than 90 °F—which is common in the summer—food should not sit out more than one hour. Refrigerate or freeze leftovers promptly and discard any food that has been sitting out too long.

It is important to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold. Hot foods can be kept hot on the grill and cold foods can be kept chilled with ice packs or ice sources in a cooler.

Still have questions? Ask Karen!

Whether you are cooking in the kitchen or grilling out this Independence Day, make Mobile Ask Karen the first guest on your list. Ask Karen is USDA's virtual food safety representative available 24/7 at www.AskKaren.gov or m.AskKaren.gov on your smartphone. Mobile Ask Karen can also be downloaded from the Android app store. On June 26, 2012, FSIS launched "Mobile Pregúntele a Karen," the Spanish-language version of Mobile Ask Karen. Mobile Pregúntele Karen and the desktop-based Pregúntele a Karen also are available 24 hours a day at m.PregunteleKaren.gov or PregunteleKaren.gov.

Consumers can email, chat with a live representative, or call the USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline directly from these apps. To use these features on the app, simply choose "Contact Us" from the menu. The live chat option and the toll-free USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline, 1-888-MPHotline (1-888-674-6854), are available in English and Spanish from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. ET Monday through Friday.

This seasonal food safety outreach is part of a multi-faceted USDA initiative to prevent foodborne illness. As part of this initiative, USDA has joined the Ad Council, the FDA and the CDC to launch Food Safe Families, a consumer food safety education campaign. It is the first joint public service campaign to empower families to further reduce their risk of foodborne illness at home by checking their key food safety steps: clean, separate, cook, and chill. For more information, go to www.foodsafety.gov.

Today's action is in addition to other FSIS has put in place during President Barack Obama's Administration to date to safeguard the food supply, prevent foodborne illness, and improve consumers' knowledge about the food they eat. These initiatives support the three core principles developed by the President's Food Safety Working Group: prioritizing prevention; strengthening surveillance and enforcement; and improving response and recovery. Some of these actions include:

- Test-and-hold policy that will significantly reduce consumer exposure to unsafe meat products, should the policy become final, because products cannot be released into commerce until Agency test results for dangerous contaminants are known.

- Labeling requirements that provide better information to consumers about their food by requiring nutrition information for single-ingredient raw meat and poultry products and ground or chopped products.
- Public Health Information System, a modernized, comprehensive database with information on public health trends and food safety violations at the nearly 6,100 plants FSIS regulates.

- Performance standards for poultry establishments for continued reductions in the occurrence of pathogens. After two years of enforcing the new standards, FSIS estimates that approximately 5,000 illnesses will be prevented each year under the new Campylobacter standards, and approximately 20,000 illnesses will be prevented under the revised Salmonella standards each year.

Santa Fe hosts world's largest folk art market

By Jeri Clausing

Associated Press

SANTA FE, N.M. ~ The stories are as diverse as the artists themselves: Afghan women who have lifted themselves out of poverty through a cooperative that sells their traditional embroidery; a former cook for the Sudan People's Liberation Army who now sells beaded corsets to help support her family and send her many grandchildren to school; and sisters from Kyrgyzstan who make hand-stitched felt and silk scarves using a family tradition that dates back some 300 years.

The women and their tales are just a sampling of the real lives behind the work that will be featured in New Mexico next month at the popular Santa Fe International Folk Art Market, which sends 90 percent of its $2 million-plus annual proceeds back to the artists and programs that can dramatically alter their lives and their communities.

The market is the largest of its kind and runs July 13-15, turning Santa Fe's Milner Plaza into a global destination where buyers can mingle with artisans, some of whom have left remote villages for the very first time.

The show is among this artistic mountain enclave's many popular summer events, drawing 20,741 people last year.

The biggest difference between this and Santa Fe's other shows, like its Spanish and Indian markets, is the impact it has in far-flung corners of the globe. Besides making life-saving or life-changing contributions like helping communities build schools, houses and wells for clean drinking water, the effort is also helping to preserve traditional art forms while teaching the artists how to create cooperatives and businesses for selling their wares year-round.

Now in its ninth year, the market was founded by of Charlene Cerny and Judith Espinar, two longtime fixtures in the Santa Fe art scene and lovers of folk art.

Espinar says the idea blossomed quickly after she called UNESCO for help locating artists.

"(They) said come to Paris, look through the files. We'll give you 10 Gold Medal winners," Espinar said.

Local businesses quickly lined up to help support the show and sponsor the artists. And the rest is, well, history.

Cerny originally agreed to join Espinar in the project only if it had no more than 25 artists. The first show had 18. This year, more than 150 artists from 49 countries will be in attendance selling everything from traditional scarves and attire to jewelry, rugs and baskets. Fifty-four participants will be representing cooperatives with more than 20,000 artisans. Since its inception, the market has earned more than $12 million. Prices at the market range from $5 to tens of thousands.

Espinar and Cerny travel the world looking for new artists. A jury vets the applicants and some first-timers are offered financial assistance. The artists are also offered training to help them market and sell their wares, enabling many to return in later years on their own.

Among this year's first-timers will be Mary Padar Kuojok, who spent many years traveling with and cooking for the Sudan People's Liberation Army. When the Republic of South Sudan was created in 2010, she moved to Juba, where she joined the Roots Project, which helps tribal woman from around the country revive long-ignored art traditions.

Kuojok, now a grandmother, hadn't made the beaded corsets that were unique to her Dinka tribe since she was a child, said Roots Project founder Anyieth D'Wol, a former human rights worker.

"I asked her if she knew how to make something traditional ... and it was beautiful," D'Wol said. About 15 such corsets will be available at the market, but D'Wol said pricing had not yet been set.

Kuojok's trip to Santa Fe will be only her second time to leave South Sudan; her first trip was to Nairobi to get a visa.

She will also bring beaded work from artisans from other tribes represented by the Roots Project.

D'Wol said the Roots Project not only helps women learn to take care of themselves and establish a business sense, but is also helping to revive traditions that have gotten lost in two decades of war.

"When I first started working with the women, it was 'What do you know how to make?' I had no idea what they were. They are not documented and many of the items are rarely even worn by the tribes anymore."

A similar project in Afghanistan, Kandahar Treasures, is giving financial freedom to women who do the traditional geometric embroidery unique to the area. Started by Rangina Hamidi, an Afghan whose family fled war to the United States when she was a child, the project now has more than 400 women selling products.

Some of the women earn up to $100 a month, which is almost double the average government salary. Homes with mothers and daughters participating have dramatically improved their family's economic standing, and given women more control over their lives.

"One of the women has 13 daughters," Hamidi said. "In a country where manhood is so great, any woman who gives birth to that many daughters is cursed. Now that they have been earning money for almost nine years ... they have risen themselves out of poverty. They are no longer invited as servants to weddings and parties, they are invited as guests."

Some of the artists are well established, but this year, 40 percent will be showing at the market for the first time.

Cerny and Espinar say the market has become a destination, drawing visitors last year from 26 states.

"More and more people are looking at they do as a vote for what they care about," said Cerny. "... They are getting the idea that they are helping build a school in Pakistan, helping put a roof on a women's shelter."
