University of Illinois will drop Chief Illiniwek mascot

By David Mercer Associated Press Writer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) ~ On a fall day in 1926, University of Illinois student Lester Leutwiler danced onto football field Philadelphia at halftime of an Illini football game.

Wearing a homemade American Indian costume, Leutwiler was the first Chief Illiniwek, and began an 81year-old tradition of performances by the mascot at football and basketball games.

Under pressure from the NCAA, activists and some students and faculty, the university announced that current chief Dan Maloney's per

Matt Cornelius stepped into the role of ombudsman for the Oneida Community Health Center and Oneida Behavioral Health on Monday, February

Cornelius will work with patients and clients of the two organizations to address complaints.

"I'm going to be acting as a third party mediator type, working with patients that have issues like a problem with a bill, or maybe they thought they were treated unfairly," said Cornelius.

He will also work with employees in both areas.

"If the employees are having issues internally, I would also be there for them as well," said Cornelius.

Cornelius has a Bachelors of Arts in Theology from Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Oklahoma. He has previously worked as a lay minster for the Oneida Methodist Church and is active with the First Assembly of God. He hopes to use the counseling skills he developed in the ministry when working with patients and employees.

"If somebody is having problems, I offer 'can I say a prayer for you?' They're very accepting of that. Most people are very open to that," he said.

He hopes to expand his role in the future to handle patients and staff at the Anna John Nursing Home.

Cornelius is the son of Clarence and Sandy Cornelius. He grew up in the San Francisco area until moving back to Oneida with his parents in 1984.

He and his wife Penny have two young sons, Aaron and Stephen. In his spare time, Cornelius likes to fly remote controlled planes.

Community members may contact Cornelius at 920-869-4569 or at 1-800-236-2868, or email mcornell@oneidanation.org. His office is located the Little Bear Development Center at N7332 Water Circle Place.

"Since doing the freelance it's always been an interest of mine...you get to be creative," Nate said.

Nate previously had been working in the insurance field and is looking forward to his new responsibilities with the Kalihwisaks.

"I'm looking forward to going out in the Oneida community and meeting people, getting to know a lot more people than I do," he said.

If the name Wisneski sounds familiar it's because Nate is the second of two brothers that have graced the pages of the Kalihwisaks. Nate's older brother Phil worked for the Kalihwisaks five years before moving over to the Public Relations department.

Spitzer agrees with Mohawks for casino in

By Michael Gormley

Associated Press Writer ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) \sim A

decades-old proposal for a casino in the Catskills took a major step Monday with Gov. Eliot Spitzer's agreement for the St. Regis Mohawk tribe to build and operate a gaming Monticello center Raceway.

The Sullivan County casino that would be expected to draw gamblers from the nearby New York City area is also expected to provide hundreds of millions of dollars in revenue to state government, as well as help revive the economically hard-pressed region. The $600 million casino is expected to provide 3,000 permanent jobs and create a building boom in the

The casino would also mark a return of the region as an entertainment hot spot, where top comedians, bands, singers and boxers once made regular stops. The names of the now closed Catskills resorts and the stars who honed their craft there are part of American entertainment legend.

"By working together, we can establish a premier gaming facility that will produce significant revenues for the tribe and the state and help spark a resurgence of the Catskills region," Spitzer

Under the agreement, the state would receive 20 percent of the revenue from slot machines for the first two years, 23 percent for the next two years and 25 percent after that. Ending another major sticking point, the tribe agreed to comply with state tax, labor and health laws.

For a sovereign tribe, the state couldn't simply require adherence to state laws.

"We commend Governor Spitzer's decisive action and commitment to our Sullivan County casino project which we believe will generate tremendous opportunities in and around the Catskills region," the Mohawk St. Regis Tribal Council said in a prepared statement. "We rejoice in the prospects this important project presents for the future of the St. Regis Mohawk Tribe, the people of Sullivan County, and New Catskills Yorkers across the state."

The 30-year effort, however, isn't over.

Spitzer and the tribe are now urging the secretary of the U.S. Department of Interior to make final approvals, including taking raceway land into a trust. The department includes the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The Democratic governor wouldn't predict how the Republican Bush administration will react.

A community meeting was held on February 21, at the Radisson, to discuss options for the proposed high school & fitness/adventure/recreation center.

Topics discussed included proposed sites, where construction funds would come from and potential enrollment numbers among others.

Also discussed were numbers gathered from a survey given to students, faculty and community members. The survey focused on gathering information about potential services/electives offered at facilities. proposed Survey participants were asked to rate various items on a scale of importance relative to each individual.

The survey was conducted by a MarketTools Inc. a third party marketing firm.

Survey results are available on the Oneida Intranet bulletin board. Also there is information regarding the project on the Oneida Nation web-site: http://www.oneidanation.org.

Danforth Rodriguez, Michelle L. 'Babygirl' November 28, 1967 - February 20, 2007

Michelle Lynn (Babygirl) Danforth-Rodriguez, 39, Oneida, passed away unexpectedly Tuesday February 20, 2007 at a local hospital due to a long illness of renal failure, surrounded by a loving family. She was born on November 28, 1967 in Green Bay, WI to Eunice Stevens and the late Reginald Danforth. She graduated from Seymour High School. She was employed with the Oneida Senior Services until she became ill with renal failure in 1998. Babygirl loved her children and grandchildren very much; she loved to explore restaurants, joy riding and was a big fan of jewelry.

Michelle is survived by her children: Jerome Cornelius, Alicia Elm and her friend Nestor Ramirez and Randall Danforth, sisters and brothers: Brenda (Fred) Lynk, Reginald Danforth, Michael (Bernadette) Danforth (Blackthunder) and Prairie Rose Danforth, grandchildren: Anthony and Andrew, nephews: Scott, Jonathan, Alex and Ethan. Her special friends Jr. Wayka, Darlene, and many aunts, uncles and

Stock car racer's winnings donated to charity

By Dawn Walschinski Kalihwisaks

Much like the oval track Carl Christjohn races on, his life has come full circle.

Christjohn, who lives in Antigo, Wis., began stock car racing on the Langlade County Speedway last season after a couple of years away from the sport.

"I told my kids that I'm so passionate about (racing) that I would race for nothing," he

After learning that two friends of his had breast cancer, he decided to donate all of his winnings to the American Cancer Society through the Langlade County Relay for Life.

"I sponsored my own team in memory of my mother," said Christjohn. Breast cancer took the life of Mary Ann Christjohn on Christmas Eve in 1973.

"My racing theme last year was Racing for Life, so that's been our motto," said Christiohn.

Racing his '75 Nova in the WASOTA Street Stocks has been a family affair. His daughter Kayona sold 50/50 raffle tickets in the stands at races with some of the money going to the Relay for Life. Christjohn's 15-year-old son Cody was his crew chief. In addition, Christjohn's brother Lee Christjohn and three nephews are involved in the

"You can't define family better than that," he said.

Christjohn donated $1723.55 in prize money to the American Cancer Society the night of the Langlade County Speedway Banquet, Saturday, February 24.

He and his children also raised nearly $1200 for the Relay for Life, an event where participants take turns walking through the night to raise money for the American Cancer Society.

Christjohn credits his friend Roy Dieck for helping him get back into stock car racing. Dieck's wife Shirley is one of the people that inspired Christjohn to donate his winnings to cancer research.

"I think it's fabulous that he would do that. He hasn't held any of it back, everything he won is going to the American Cancer Society," said Shirley, who's breast cancer is in remission.

Christjohn's passion for racing rubbed off on the elderly couple.

"We're 71-years-old, but Roy has worked on (Christjohn's) car and helped him with painting," said Shirley.

Christjohn appreciates having the chance to race again and to give back to his community. He struggled with alcoholism for 30 years, and was able to become sober with help from an Oneida Social Services program.

"When I came out of it about three years ago, I knew my mom was there with me helping me," said Christjohn. "She knows my passion is racing. If I never accomplish anything this day on, I'll know I at least tried something."

Authenticity key for Pulaski sandwich shop owner

By Steven J. Gandy

Kalihwisaks

Pulaski is host to a new sandwich shop thanks to David Roberto. Roberto has taken the recipes his father once used in Chicago to open Paisano's Chicago Style Italian Beef Sandwiches. The restaurant is located at 131 West Pulaski Street.

His father, who was Italian, ran a successful Italian pizza and sandwich shop on the south side of Chicago for many years before his death a few years ago.

"We serve the recipes my father used...I've worked in this business, down there, so I'm kind of used to it," Roberto said.

Roberto is a believer in the saying 'from small beginnings come great things.'

"We don't have an extensive menu here, we have a really, really, small, small menu," Roberto said. "I believe in doing something the right way. Some restaurants have pretty big menus, we don't... we are doing authentic Chicago style Italian beef and we are doing it with authentic recipes not the pre-made stuff other places use."

Paisano's menu consists of four sandwiches; a Chicago style Italian beef, Paisano Combo, Italian Bomber and Italian sausage sandwich along with garlic bread and sandwiches are all made fresh Roberto's family using recipe.

The name Paisano's is Italian for friend and that feeling truly comes across when you walk in the restaurant. It's a quaint, bistro-type atmosphere with red and white checkerboard tablecloths and a fast and friendly greeting as soon as you walk in the door.

Pulaski may seem an odd place for a Green Bay resident to open a restaurant, but Roberto had his reasons.

"It was the right market area, I think it's expanding out here...the market is booming, Roberto explained. "If I can work the bugs out of here, then I'll know exactly what to do in Green Bay...I would have a lot more compethe goal."

Roberto is no stranger to owning and operating his own business. He has been successfully operating his other business for five years. ARC Automotive Reconditioning Center is located in Green Bay and, until now, has been the focus of all of Roberto's attention. Now, however, his attention is being divided between the two enterprises and, according to Roberto, he has "been burning the candle at both ends" trying to get Paisano's open for business.

Roberto said it took about 18 months from the time he decided to open a restaurant until the time the doors opened. He used his own monies along with some financing from Bay Bank to get this endeavor off the other various side items. The tition in Green Bay, but that is ground and made into a reali-

He had to create a business plan, get financing, find a location, and perfect the product along with a laundry list of other tasks before the first customer could ever be

"I have been running a different business for the last five years; I do know what I need to do to run a business. It wasn't easy," Roberto said.

The restaurant opened on February 15 and a Grand Opening is being planned, however, a date for it has yet to be determined.

Paisano's hours are; 11am 7pm Monday thru Friday, 2pm - 8pm on Saturday and closed on Sunday.

What's in the Box?

Submitted by Zubella

Bay Bank Executive Vice President Millions of Americans rent

a safe deposit box from their bank. Before renting, you need to make sure you understand how it works.

Most people rent a safe deposit box to store important and valuable items that would be difficult, if not impossible, to replace. The box offers privacy and security for these items rather than keeping them in your home where they are prone to burglary, fire and water damage.

What should go in a safe deposit box?

Experts suggest you keep family records, such as birth, marriage and death certificates, originals of insurance policies, deeds, titles, stocks and bonds in the box. You might want to include other valuables such as expensive jewelry, rare collectibles and medals. Also consider videotaping or taking photos of the contents of your home and keeping them in the safe deposit box should you need to file an insurance claim.

What should NOT go in a safe deposit box?

There are some items that you may need to access quickly during an emergency situation that you would not want in your safe deposit box, in the event you need these items on a weekend or holiday when the bank is closed or the bank itself is closed due to an emergency. These items might include your "power of attorney", passports, medical directives, and funeral or burial instructions. You may want to keep copies of these items in the box and give the originals to your attorney or a family member or friend.

Who has access to your box?

Only you, unless you have a co-renter who might include a spouse, child, or close friend. To access your box, it takes two keys-yours and the bank's. The bank doesn't keep a copy of your key, so if it is lost or stolen, it will cost you several hundred dollars to the box open. Legislative Review, Letters LLLL

Chairman Gerald Danforth

Sagoli,

January and February have been extremely busy as federal activity on issues from Health Care to Reservation

Chairman's Corner…

Roads has been ongoing. Most recently I participated in the National Congress of American Indians' Executive Council's Mid Winter Session where issues dealing with Agriculture (the Farm Bill), Offenders Registry Management, Violence Against Women and Methamphetamine use in Indian Country were all addressed. Each of these issues has an effect on Indian Country, some of which are being addressed right here in our own back yard. As we continue to move forward throughout this term, the Oneida Business Committee has been dedicated to supporting initiatives which address each issue important to the Oneida community.

In addition to movement taking place at the national level, tribes here in Wisconsin have been working diligently with the State to address similar concerns. The new President of the Great Lakes Intertibal Council, Chairwoman Patricia DePerry of Red Cliff delivered the State of the Tribes address on Thursday, March 1, 2007 in Madison.

Among the topics addressed by Chairwoman DePerry was state legislative Act 436 which was passed last year and exempted elected tribal officials form being treated as a lobbyist. While this news was brought to you by our government last year, reiterating its importance is needed because educating our states elected officials on the sovereign status of tribes and what our relationship with the state means is a continuous, ongoing effort. Chairwoman DePerry also mentioned the predicament in funding for Indian Health Care; sharing that only 38% of the cost needed to fund Indian Health Care in Wisconsin is received by the tribes. Other topics addressed before the state legincluded islature Law Enforcement, Education, Economic Development, the State-Tribal Environment, Relations and Indian Child Welfare Legislation.

Legislative issues at the federal and state level are not the only items the Business Committee has been addressing. The New York Land Claims has had some recent developments. There have been inquiries about these developments to my office as well as to other Committee members. While I am unable to provide details to you in this article, there are several community meetings being planned. Please watch for the upcoming announcements and I encourage you to attend one of these meetings to get the latest information relating to Oneida's land claim.

More than fifteen inches of snow fell last week during snow storm "Danielle" and it has made for some wonderful outdoor winter activity. It has been a pleasure to observe the Headstart children bundled up and sledding behind the Norbert Hill Center and I hope you have all had an opportunity to enjoy winter activities such as skiing, snowmobiling and building snowmen.

Tournament Thank You

Dear Housing Authority Board Members,

On behalf of our Oneida men's basketball team I would like to express our gratitude and appreciation for your sponsorship of our basketball team for the 2007 "Arnie Ray Harrison Jr." Basketball tournament. This tournament is a memorial tournament that is put on for a young man who passed away at a young age, as a result of a rare kidney disease. His father Arnie Harrison Sr. has made the trip from Minneapolis to Oneida many times to support our basketball tournaments. It is the Indian way to reciprocate those good thoughts and feelings back to other Indian communities. There were approximately 16 teams from all over Indian Country who played in the three day event. Thanks to your commitment to your Oneida community members, we were able to take a respectable third place. We would like to thank you for your continued support. Thanks again,

Pete King III

Special Thank You! A special thanks to the Oneida Community and all those whom made donations in support of the recent taco fundraiser for the J.E.G. (Josh, Erwin, and Greg) Memorial Basketball Team. All proceeds will go towards entry fees to upcoming basketball tournaments.

We want to carry on the memory of our brother and our friend whom were all gifted and talented in their own way. Their young lives were all taken away so tragically from our community.

May your spirits continue to live on!

Fairness and Leadership?

After the General Tribal Council passed the 2007 budget, my take home pay increased approximately $25.00 per week. I now take home $773.00 weekly as a member of the Oneida Business Committee. I'm satisfied, well anyway I was

Now I'm finding out that the vast majority of Tribal employees have NOT yet received the merit increases which they were promised when the 2007 budget was passed. So what we have here in our Oneida Tribe, is the leadership enjoying a pay increase since October of last year while at the same time, the employees not being treated the same. It is a situation that is very embarrassing and upsetting, at least to my Office.

I am writing in response to a recent letter under the heading "In Favor of Per Capita,

It has been a long time since I last wrote or responded to a letter. I felt however, I author of that letter, I must say it left me confused and frustrated. The confusing part comes from the references to "they." Who are "they" exactly? If the reference is to the Business Committee or the people charged with caring for the "purse strings" (money), then this is very dangerous and wrong thinking. Ladies and Gentlemen, "they" are US! WE are the Oneida Nation, WE control the (money), WE control the spending and WE are entitled to the benefits all that money gives us including Per Capita. By saying quote "the Oneida Tribe is under NO obligation to share those monies with me" unquote is where I get frustrated.

As Tribal Members, we are

When I was a young I had a chance to meet many great Indian leaders. I saw them as different from other leaders. They seemed to be more concerned about the welfare of the people then for themselves. In particular, I met Robert E. Lewis, the Governor of Zuni Pueblo and Cilo Black Crow, a spiritual leader from Wanblee, South Dakota. Governor Lewis lived in a small white trailer house on the north end of the Village and lived a modest life. Mr. Black Crow lived in a log cabin on the southern plains of South Dakota. I do not recall either of them ever expressing concern for their То them, I think life was all

ABSOLUTELY entitled to and the "Oneida Tribe" is under EVERY obligation to share any and all "monies" and benefits with us. Simply put, by saying this and giving total control of this Nation over to an "elected body" takes all rights and freedoms away from you and I. The bureaucracy of this Nation has grown exponentially over the years, and "they" spoon feed what is rightfully yours Proud and Progressive? back to you. Spending for numerous failed business ventures, the hoops and hurdles that have to be crossed to get loans, housing and medical assistance for example are signs of a "government," or an "elected body" grown to excess, WAY to big and TOTALLY out of control. When I was on the "campaign trail" some years ago I ran on the themes of shrinking our bureaucracy or government and working hard to give the people of our Nation their power back. Unfortunately in our elections, it really is a "popularity contest" more than being elected on issues important to the health and survival of the Oneida Nation. Hopefully someday that will change. Frankly, what family I come from should not mat-

And no, it is NOT free money. A lot of us including me work hard to make the profits for this Nation. Per Capita is a direct result of that. Unlike other Indian Nations in Wisconsin, we have a very large membership. With all of the services provided to all of us, there is not a lot of room for large Per Capita payments...right now. Step up for jobs As a member of the Native American community of the Green Bay area, I am concerned about how high positions seem to be filled with non-Native employees. Where are our Native Americans who do qualify? I urge our Native Americans to pay attention and step up to make this change. We utilize places like the Amerindian center for many things. We can sit back and talk about change; my question is how do we make change? Actions speak so much louder then words. There are only a few community members who attend these open meetings here in the Green Bay area. I've attended a few times. I always felt that I was just one voice, what could I possibly accomplish? The reality is my one voice with many others does make a difference, it is then that we become strong.

We have to quit thinking our voice isn't going to make a difference. We must give positive ideas and concerns so our centers can become more self-efficient. I believe we as a community have the right to know about who sits on our boards. Actually in any position that effects the communities it is the body appointed authorities that make or break facilities. My questions are:

Do we have the leaders who are not influenced?

Are they mentally and physically capable?

don't get involved.

So how do we know? If we

Connecticut tribe to buy out developer of Kenosha casino project

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ A Kenosha businessman who dropped out of an $808 million casino project as he is being investigated by federal authorities will have his portion of the deal bought out by the Mohegan Tribe of Connecticut.

Dennis Troha backed out of the casino project on Friday, saying he wanted more time to do other things. His attorney, Frank Gimbel, confirmed Tuesday that the FBI and U.S. Attorney's Office are looking into more than $170,000 in donations that Troha and family members made to Gov. Jim Doyle since 2002.

Doyle has the final say on whether the off-reservation entertainment center and casino at Kenosha's Dairyland Greyhound Park is built. The project is being developed by Menominee and Mohegan Indian tribes.

The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reported the Troha investigation on Saturday, quoting anonymous sources. Gimbel said Tuesday that the newspaper's report was accurate, but declined to comment further.

Spokeswomen for the Milwaukee office of the FBI and U.S. Attorney Steve Biskupic both declined to comment.

State law limits individuals to $10,000 in donations in any year to any one candidate. The law also prohibits people who have reached the limit from providing others with money to make a contribution. To prove Troha acted illegally, criminal investigators would have to show that family members or friends received money and were instructed to make donations to a specific candidate, said Mike McCabe, director

Wisconsin Campaign. "It's not something that is ever readily apparent on a campaign finance report," Troha donated $10,000 to

Doyle in 2002 and 2003, while his wife, Natalie, gave the maximum to Doyle in 2002. Patricia Troha, the wife of Troha's brother, also gave the $10,000 maximum in 2002. A variety of other Troha family members numerous donations to Doyle since 2002, many of still needs the OK from the federal office and Doyle. The governor has repeatedly said he will not make up his mind on the casino until it reaches his desk. He also has said donations from Troha and family members will not affect his decision. Peter Schultz, project coordinator for Mohegan Tribal Gaming Authority, said his tribe's buyout of Troha's interest should not

Former Ney aide pleads guilty in congressional bribery case

By Lara Jakes Jordan Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -The top aide to convicted former Rep. Bob Ney of Ohio pleaded guilty Monday to federal conspiracy charges stemming from a congressional bribery scandal that downed his boss.

Smiling nervously at times, William Heaton, 28, acknowledged accepting a golf trip to Scotland, expensive meals, and tickets to sporting events between 2002 and 2004 as payoffs for helping clients of disgraced lobbyist Jack Abramoff.

Heaton worked for Ney, a Republican, from September 2001 to July 2006, ultimately serving as his chief of staff.

"You received things of value in exchange for performing functions for Mr. Abramoff and other lobbyists who worked for him, as well as a foreign businessman. Is that correct?" U.S. District Judge Ellen Segal Huvelle asked Heaton during the 20minute hearing.

"Yes, your honor," Heaton replied in a firm voice. He pleaded guilty to one count of federal conspiracy.

He faces a maximum sentence of five years in prison and $250,000 in fines, but probably would serve between 18 and 24 months as outlined under federal sentencing guidelines. No date was set for sentencing.

Heaton has agreed to give the Justice Department information that might be useful in an ongoing investigation that has targeted lobbyists, lawmakers, their aides and members of the Bush administra-

Among other things, Heaton acknowledged accepting trips to New Orleans and Lake George, N.Y., an Adirondack resort village. He also took what Assistant U.S. Attorney James A. Crowell IV other prosecutors described as thousands of dollars worth of gambling chips from a foreign businessman at a casino during a travel stop in London. The unnamed businessman was hoping to sell U.S.-made airplanes and airplane parts in a foreign coun-

In exchange, Heaton said he helped Ney insert an amendment into election reform legislation to benefit at least one Indian tribe in Texas that was an Abramoff client. And he lobbied the State Department for a travel visa for the daughter of another Abramoff client in Russia.

Heaton underreported how much the Scotland trip was worth and its purpose on congressionally Ney's required travel disclosure forms. He admitted he helped conceal some of the money Ney received, storing it in a safe in the congressman's

He also lied on his own House financial disclosure forms, describing the golf trip as official travel and failing to report gifts Abramoff gave Heaton, a 2000 graduate of the College of William & Mary, declined to comment to reporters as he left Huvelle's courtroom. Before becoming Ney's chief of staff, he was a floor assistant to House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., and worked for the Committee on House Administration, which Ney once chaired.

Ney was sentenced to 21/2 years in prison in January for trading political favors for golf trips, campaign donations and other gifts in the Abramoff lobbying scandal. Ney was the first congressman charged in the affair.

formance at a Wednesday basketball game will be the chief's last dance.

The decision follows two decades of votes, studies and committee meetings aimed at easing campus division over the mascot, which some American Indians and others view as an insult and some alumni and students see as a cherished tradition.

The NCCA ended up forcing the university's hand.

The decision ends NCAA sanctions that had prevented Illinois from hosting postseason sports since 2005. That pressure, Board of Trustees Chairman Lawrence Eppley said, made a tough decision easier.

"I liked the chief for years," he said in an interview on campus. "When you change vour focus from what vou want to what's best for the university, it's not so hard."

Chief supporters see the decision as the bitter end of a proud tradition.

"That means that we will have a museum Indian," said Howard Wakeland, president of the Honor the Chief Society, a group of chief supporters. "Put him in a cage and walk by and say that's our symbol ... That seriously kills the real heart of the chief."

Illinois still will be able to use the name Illini because it's short for Illinois and the school can use the term Fighting Illini, because it's considered a reference to the team's competitive spirit, school officials said.

The school could create a new mascot, Eppley said, provided it doesn't use American Indian imagery. But the board probably won't be heavily involved in that decision, he Eppley told reporters that the decision to retire the chief did not require a vote of the trustees, but was made after the board reached a consensus. He declined to say whether the board was unanimous in its support for dropping the mascot.

In a letter to Eppley, the NCAA said sanctions against Illinois will be lifted after next Wednesday's game at Assembly Hall against Michigan.

The sanctions thus far have prevented Illinois from hosting only two postseason events, both in low-profile

But the Illini men's basketball team is expected to play in the postseason this year, if not in the NCAA championship tournament, then in the less-prestigious NIT. The NIT generally makes highprofile teams such as Illinois hosts of early-round games.

Eppley said potential revenue from home games didn't affect the timing of the chief decision, but said the prospect of having to play what otherwise would be home games on the road was a factor.

Athletic director Ron Guenther said he was disappointed in the decision, but that the NCAA's sanction hurt the school's athletes and coaches.

"This is an extremely emotional day for people on both sides of the issue, but the decision announced today ends a two-decade long strugsurrounding Chief Illiniwek on this campus ... ,' Guenther said. "Personally, as an alumnus and former athlete, I am disappointed, however, as an administrator, I understand the decision that had to be made."

Basketball coach Bruce Weber said he too was disapcalling pointed, Illiniwek a "tremendous tradition." But Weber also said he understood why the decision was made, pointing out that the NCAA barred the men's tennis team from hosting the first and second rounds of the NCAA tournament last May.

A spokesman for the university's Native American Studies program welcomed the end of the mascot.

"Now it is time to heal and take responsibility for the history of Chief Illiniwek on our campus," John McKinn, of university's American House, said in a

But McKinn, a Maricopa Indian of Arizona, said the university also should return the regalia worn to portray the chief. The costume was made in part by a now-deceased Sioux.

On Friday in Urbana, Champaign County Circuit Court Judge Michael Jones an Illinois graduate - also rejected a request by Maloney and assistant chief Logan Ponce for a court order to ban the university from "capitulating to the NCAA by announcing the retirement of Chief Illiniwek."

Neither Maloney nor Ponce were in court Friday. Their attorney did not return messages left at his office.

A state district judge in North Dakota in November granted a preliminary injunction in a similar lawsuit filed over the University of North Dakota's Fighting Sioux nickname and use of American Indian imagery.

In the Illinois lawsuit, the students argued that by imposing sanctions NCAA failed to provide due process to the students and the university.

The NCAA has said it believes its sanctions are

Richardson urges delegation to support funding for Indian health SANTA FE (AP) – New Mexico's congressional delegation is being urged by Gov. Bill Richardson to help reauthorize legislation that would improve health care for American Indians around the nation.

The Indian Health Care Improvement Act was reauthorized four times since first being enacted in 1976, but Congress has failed to move forward with it the past six

"In several meetings held over the last year and a half with New Mexico's 22 federally recognized Indian pueblos, tribes and nations, one issue came across loud and clear: we must improve Native American health care," Richardson said Tuesday in a letter sent to the delegation.

Richardson said the Bush administration's 2008 fiscal year budget would cut funding for urban Indian health care as well as maintenance and construction funding for tribal health centers. Those cuts, the governor, would have a "devastating effect" on New Mexico's Indian population. State health and human service agencies are working to improve outreach and complement federal programs, but Richardson said state efforts shouldn't relieve the federal government of its responsibility to provide health care for

According to a study by the state Health Department, Richardson said Indians have some of the highest rates of death due to diabetes, pneumonia, alcoholism and cirrho-

He noted that Indians are disproportionately uninsured compared to the rest of the state. He said that's partly because many Indians believe they have access to health care when in fact those services have either eroded or are under funded.

"Flags of Our Fathers" Star Adam Beach Celebrates Inaugural Golf Classic

Denver, CO. (February 21, 2007) Acclaimed Native American actor Adam Beach launched the inaugural Adam Beach Golf Classic in Palm Springs, California on January 5, 2007. The fundraising event, sponsored by the Agua Caliente Band of Cahuilla Indians, was held to support the establishment of the Adam Beach Endowment humble beginnings to internafor Native Arts at the American Indian College Fund (Fund). The Golf Classic garnered over $60,000 in donations from various tribes, corporations and individual supporters.

Mr. Beach is from the Salteaux First Nation in Manitoba, and has risen from tional critical acclaim in film and television. He is one of the most successful and recognizable indigenous actors working in Hollywood today, having appeared in over 40 films and television produc-

Mr. Beach hosted the event to support scholarships for Native students in the arts through a permanent endowment. He stated, "The money raised from the Golf Classic serves as the foundation in creating the Adam Beach Endowment for Native Arts. The Endowment will be housed at the Fund and will grant out scholarships for American Indians Aboriginal youth pursuing the arts. I envision opportunities for our indigenous youth to have a chance to develop artistically, and to change how Hollywood portrays our people."

The American Indian College Fund is proud to partner with Adam Beach and Poitra Consulting on the Endowment. The Fund is ideally suited to manage the endowment assets, as the organization is one of the largest providers of private scholarships for American Indian students. The outstanding support for the inaugural Golf Classic serves as a beacon of hope in the life of a Native student, and helps ensure that they can meet their educational goals with the proper resources.

Per Capita, Now or Later?

By Racheal Ninham

ONHS Junior

Should students receive their Per Cap (per capita payment) once they graduate? Or should they receive their Per Cap once they turn 18?

Those questions do come up a lot when young adults receive their money from the tribe and opinions are mixed. I interviewed a few ONHS seniors who received their Per Cap. I asked questions like "What did you do with your Per Cap?" and "Do you think that students should receive Per Cap once they graduate or when they turn 18?"

To the first question, one student said, "I bought a car and a Play Station 3 with some games. I also bought a

The other student said, "I paid off the bad of me and most of it is still in the bank."

When I had asked them whether students should receive Per Cap when they graduate or once they turn 18, the first student said, "I think they should receive if when they turn eighteen."

The other student said, "I think they should receive it once they turn eighteen because they don't give us enough money to graduate. But if we got more money, then I could see on waiting until we graduate."

Out of 23 students and teachers, 9 people voted for getting the Per Cap right away at age 18 and the other 14 voted for getting Per Cap once a student graduates.

One reason some of the people voted for the second option was that they felt "students should have a diploma or a GED before they get their money so they don't miss school and so they can actually think about what they will do with their money."

So, the question remains. "Should a student get that Per Cap right away or when they graduate?"

State of the Packers - pt. 2 By Kyle White

ONHS Sophomore

Last issue we looked at some of the free agents that the Packers might want to consider this off season, Randy Moss being the biggest name. This issue, we'll take a look at the upcoming draft.

The Packers have the 16th selection in this years NFL Draft, which is right in the middle of the first round. At that position, they could still select an impact player.

While Running Back is not a major need, Ahman Green is over 30 years old and is currently a free agent. The top two Running Backs on most team's draft boards are Adrian Peterson from Oklahoma and Marshawn Lynch from California. While Peterson figures to be gone when the Packers pick at 16, Lynch still has the chance to be around. Many mock drafts have the Packers selecting Lynch, but the Packers may feel as if they don't need to draft Lynch. Green may want to come back, but he would like a deal longer than one more year, as it will probably the last contract he signs in the NFL.

Another option and probably the most pressing need is Defensive Line. While the line played well during the four-game win streak, some consistency is needed. Pro Bowl End Aaron Kampman is a lock to start, along with Tackle Ryan Pickett, while the other end and tackle spots are open. Kabeer Gbaja-Biamila is still a good Pass Rush specialist, but the Packers still need a big, impact Defensive End. Michigan Tackle Alan Branch is widely considered the best defensive player in the draft, but he is figured to be a top 10 or even top 5 draft pick. Gaines Adams of Clemson and Jamaal Anderson from Arkansas are both ends that could still be around when the Packers pick.

There is still always the possibility of the Packers trading up to try and get Adrian Peterson, but it unlikely. Peterson will most likely be gone within the top 5, and trading that high to get one player may be too high of a price for the young Packers team. However, GMTed Thompson would rather build his team through the draft than free agency, and seeing a big time back such as Peterson perhaps slip to the 6th, 7th, or maybe even 8th spot could be a huge steal. He did mention he was looking for a proven

Walkin' in a Winter Wonderland

By Shakira Stevens

ONHS Senior

It's official! After receivsomewhere around a foot of snow from Sunday to Monday, the ground is covered in white. Snow has finally come to our part of the hemisphere.

That means winter activities and hats and gloves.

One winter activity I suggest is sledding. Now who could turn down sledding, it's a classic winter fun.

Of course who could forget building a snowman. (I heard carrots were on sale at Festival.) And don't forget good old fashioned snowball fights! To me a good game of throwing balls of snow at each other is my personal favorite. Of course, not at school!

Have fun in the snow and be safe while doing your own winter activities.

Challenge to Oneida Tribe: Become Bellin Corporate sponsor

By Eric Frantz

OFF Fitness Specialist /BCC Team Oneida Captain

As spring approaches us, so does the 2007 Bellin Run Corporate Challenge. Now in it's third year, the Bellin Run Corporate Challenge (BCC) was started to allow local corporations to compete in the Bellin Run on a participative and competitive basis, while promoting fitness and corporate camaraderie.

While the Oneida Bingo & Casino is a corporate sponsor of the Bellin Run, there is a greater chance for the Oneida Tribe to show the surrounding community that it is a healthy organization to be a part of. All that needs to be done is to win the BCC Triple Crown! A company that wins the BCC Triple Crown will get published in over 10,000 Bellin Run result booklets. The company will be listed on the Bellin Run website for thousands of people to see. Finally, the company may have an article printed in the local newspapers as well. All of this healthy exposure can result in positive publicity for the Oneida Tribe.

In order to win the BCC Triple Crown, a company must win the corporate timing division, the participation division, the T-shirt contest, and be a corporate sponsor of the Bellin Run.

The corporate timing division takes the top three male and top three female times and combines them for a total time. These times must be from employees or the world class runners. Last year, Team Oneida finished in 4th place.

The participation total is takes a ratio of employees compared to total number of employees each company has. Last year, Team Oneida finished in 9th place out of ten teams in the XL category (1000+ employees), with only 1.3%.

by the company that submits tion.org.

the most creative t-shirt that best represents their company pertaining to the Bellin Last year, Team Oneida finished in 2nd

For a realistic chance for Team Oneida to win the BCC Triple Crown, the following things will need to happen. We will need at least 300+ employees to even have a shot at winning the participation division. We will also need three males and three females that can run 6.2 miles in 45 minutes or less. We will also need a sharp, catchy team tshirt as well.

To help achieve the goal of winning the BCC Triple Crown, here's what Team Oneida can do for you. The first 100 employees (and potentially more!) that sign up by May 1, 2007 may get up to three T-shirts, Oneida Bingo & Casino Matchplay coupons, 1/2 off the Bellin Run entry fee (normally $17), and possibly more! Participants may also get a training schedule, training log, and assistance training for the Bellin Run. And don't forget, friends and family members of all employees may register to join Team Oneida as well, however they will not be counted in the participation or timing categories towards the BCC Triple Crown.

Remember, the Bellin Run is a distance of 6.2 miles, and is an annual community event in which you may walk or run. This year's Bellin Run will be held during the morning of Saturday June 9, 2007.

If you have any questions pertaining to the BCC Triple Crown, the Bellin Run, or anything else, please call Team Oneida Captains Eric Frantz or Lori Bembnister at 490-3852, or email them at efrantz@oneidanation.org lbembnis@oneidanat i o n . o r The T-shirt contest is won mailto:efrantz@oneidana-

Enjoy Heart Health by dishing up a traditional meal

By Joelle Frank

UWGB Dietetic Intern

Although our New Years Resolutions may be long forgotten, February is back to remind us to get back on track. Also named American Heart Month, February is the perfect time to enjoy the heart healthy benefits offered in traditional Native American

The Dietary Guidelines 2006 Diet and Lifestyle Recommendations were developed as a weapon against heart disease, recommending we all eat a variety of nutritious foods from all food groups, especially stocking up on fruits, vegetables and whole grains. The American Heart Association emphasizes this as well by recommending we make our daily food choices based on these tips:

- Choose lean meats and poultry without skin and prepare them without added saturated and trans
- Select fat-free, 1 percent fat, and low-fat dairy prod-
- Cut back on foods high in dietary cholesterol. Aim to eat less than 300 milligrams of cholesterol each day.
- Cut back on foods containing partially hydrogenated vegetable oils to reduce trans fat in your diet.
- Cut back on beverages and foods with added sugars.
- Choose and prepare foods with little or no salt. Aim to eat less than 2,300 milligrams of sodium per day.
- If you drink alcohol, drink in moderation. That means one drink per day if you're a woman and two drinks per day if you're a man.

What is an Ombudsman?

• Follow the American Heart Association recommendations when you eat out, and keep an eye on your portion sizes.

Fortunately, by making traditional choices by eating like people long ago, we can meet the criteria above, keeping our hearts healthy and strong. buffalo example...besides having a rich flavor, buffalo fits into the first three recommendations listed. Naturally lean, this traditional meat makes a healthy addition to a low-fat diet. It is lower in fat than beef and chicken and the amount of cholesterol; calories and sodium per serving also low. Some researchers even found buffalo meat to help lower cholesterol because of the heart healthy ratio of Omega 3 to Omega 6 polyunsaturated fats. Omega 3 fats are the "good fats" also found in fish that have been found to reduce inflammation.

Not sure where to buy buffalo? Most grocery stores now carry it and it is locally supplied by Oneida Nation Farms, making it convenient to purchase when short of time. Just remember to use healthy cooking methods to prepare your buffalo by baking, broiling, grilling or roasting. The more we limit fried foods in our diet the better.

A variety of plant foods are also traditionally used by Native Americans, most notably corn. Corn can fit into two food categories. Whole, it's a vegetable; ground, it can be used as a whole grain. Corn contains vitamins C, the B vitamins and fiber, all necessary to keep the heart working efficiently.

Since berries grow wild throughout America, the Native American diet enjoys cranberries, blackberries, blueberries and raspberries; offering more fiber, vitamins and minerals to the diet. The Department of Health and Human Services rated cranberries as one of the five winter super foods due to there high level of antioxidants, although all four have very Most experts high levels. agree that getting antioxidants through food rather than supplements is more beneficial to preventing heart disease. Since fresh berries are hard to find this time of year, try purchasing them frozen without sugar added. These berries can be quickly tossed onto salad or used to top cereal.

And what Native American meal doesn't include beans? Beans are little powerhouses, providing an abundant supply of potassium, B vitamins and folic acid. In addition to being an excellent low-fat source of protein, beans are also cholesterol free. Beans are loaded with soluble fiber, helping to remove cholesterol from the body, keeping it out of artery walls. Plus, if not too processed, beans will provide more heart protecting antioxidants.

These are only a few of the staples enjoyed in the traditional Native American diet. Today we can continue these heart healthy traditions by incorporating these foods into our daily meals.

You place the food in my dish Sometimes its good, sometimes I wish

A toy here and a treat there Some things I like and sometimes dare Sometimes we go out for a ride

At times we walk with leash aside You should know now I'm pure and true

These things I love and pledge to you Sometimes your here, sometimes you leave

I believe then, it's the end of me I guess I'll never be at your level

To me it's a jail, to you a kennel When company comes, I'm placed outdoors

Are you too embarrassed to admit I'm yours

You rarely look me in the eye Sometimes you scold and then I hide

Still you shout, though my hearings good I don't know why but I know I should

If you could only see things from my view

How much do Eagles grow after leaving the nest?

Environmental 2222

Eagles are close to full grown when leaving the nest.

By Bill Koonz

Specialist-Environmental Protection

Many people do not realize that most birds are full grown when they leave their nests. Bald eagles, like most birds, may gain a small amount of weight later in life, but their wings, feet and heads will not get any larger than when they leave the nest. In fact, young bald eagles typically have longer wings than do adults. Each flight feather has a tiny muscle that can be used to independently turn the feather, allowing the bird to change direction or get more lift. In young birds, those muscles are not as strong and their flight feathers are narrower and longer than in adults. In adults, the muscles are stronger and the flight feathers tend to be wider and shorter, allowing adults to be more maneuverable. Bald eagles shed (molt) their flight feathers, from each wing, one at a time each summer. That way the new feather is largely grown in before the next one is lost so the bird's ability to fly and hunt is not compromised during the molt. Bald eagles take approximately five years to reach sexual maturity and attain their white heads and tails. They are very dark their first year. In their second to fifth year, some of their body feathers are all or partially white, making individual birds more easily identified. It is during those five years that immature (juvenile) bald eagles are often mistaken for golden eagles. Bald eagles spend those five years learning how to attain food and getting prepared for rearing young. Young bald eagles are fed by their parents for a month or longer after they leave the nest. They may even be associated with their parents throughout the first winter. When the breeding season arrives in March, last year's offspring are forcefully removed from the parent's territory. Adult bald eagles defend a nesting territory from all other bald eagles. Bald eagle nests are seldom within half a mile of each other and never within sight of each other.

Bald eagles generally choose nest sites from which they can see in all directions and from which they can see water. This often means choosing a dead tree over a live one and may lead to the nest having to be replaced after only a few years. They also like to build their nests in secluded areas relatively close to a food source. The range of the bald eagle goes north to the tree line where the summers are short. Birds nesting in the far north often lay their eggs over a month prior to the ice going off local lakes.

Bald eagles are most sensitive to disturbance just at or initiation. nest Fortunately that time period often coincides with spring breakup when few people enter areas where bald eagles are nesting. Once young are in the nest, adult eagles become much more tenacious and will not abandon their nests without considerable disturbance. Their strategy is to live to fight another day if early in the breeding season but to put up a fight once they have gone through the effort of hatching young.

Watch for bald eagles, many of which remain here during mild winters. Migrating birds will return in early March when the south winds blow. They will be at least a quarter mile from each other, using air currents for transport. For more information contact: bkoonz@oneidanation.org or 920 496 5350.

Hill-Kelly named chairperson of Environmental Leadership Program

Thunderhawk girls coach announces retirement By Steven J. Gandy

Kalihwisaks The final buzzer has sounded for the coach of Oneida girls' basketball team. Cheryl Stevens has decided to hang up her coaches' whistle and make way for her successor.

Stevens had been the girls' basketball coach for four years. She devoted her time, energy and skill to the pursuit of making her team and its school a source of community

The Thunderhawk girls finished this season with a winning record of 11-10. They achieved a regional play-off birth but were knocked off in the first round.

With the season officially over, Stevens can now regain a part of her life that she willingly sacrificed four years ago when she was asked to be the girls coach.

Stevens said, "I knew it was a lot of commitment, almost four months, and it was my daughter Maria's senior year, so I didn't want just anybody in there, so I stepped up and took the job."

It was that job that has turned Steven into more than a basketball coach for her girls. She became a mentor to them as well.

"Working with these girls, a lot of the time you become their surrogate parent or big sister or what ever it is, so you become a role model and you have to maintain a certain standard for these girls," Stevens explained.

Those standards played out on the court for Stevens girls; they were expected to maintain a high degree of respect for the game, the coach and each other.

"A lot of my program ran playing two years up there as daughter, Lois, is graduating...I've missed a lot of travel with my husband and I've missed a lot of my other kids' college experiences."

Stevens hopes support for the athletic program continues to grow in the future and believes athletic growth could have some positives effects for enrollment.

"I just want to thank the parents for their support over the years and the school... I think the athletic program really needs more support from the community and from the school board to be able to do more for these kids," Stevens noted. "Maybe [the school will] even be able to get some of these other Native American students in [public] schools back to the tribal school."

Although Stevens will no longer be the girls' basketball coach, she is still willing to be a coach in other aspects of the lives of the students she has touched.

"I think once you're a coach you're always a coach. I'm going to still be coaching these girls in life. They know they can still come to me at any time. I'll still be open for that," Stevens said.

This is no more apparent than on the bumpers of her vehicle, clad front and back, with the license plate that sums up her commitment to her players, family and community...'COACH.'

Lexus is "King" of the barrels

By Nate Wisneski

Kalihwisaks

Lexus King has taken her share of falls from her horse Sugar Pie. Those falls have not stopped her from qualifying for the National Barrel Horse Association Youth World Championships in Jackson, Miss., in July.

Lexus, 10, has been riding horses since she was six months-old and started racing in competitions when she was five.

Riding and winning came natural to King. Local and national wins piled up early and often starting at age

Dennis King, father of Lexus said, "it's fun to watch her compete and have fun. She makes a lot of friends and gets to see a lot of places."

Dennis also said, "This teaches her responsibility... when her grandpa is gone she will take care of the chores, feed them, get them ready." Lexus added, "I even ride without Grandpa there."

The Kings have learned that barrel racing could become an Olympic event by the time Lexus turns 18. She has targeted this as one of her goals, along with making the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas, Nev. The NFR is known as the "Superbowl of Rodeos."

Sharon and Dennis King plan on making the trip to Jackson to support Lexus and are very proud of her.

The family has set up a sponsorship fund at Bay Bank in Green Bay to help offset the cost of the event.
