Students set higher gift giving goal

The Christmas spirit is high at West De Pere High School among members of the school's Culture Club. The group of students have again agreed to adopt families for the holidays. The 'adoption' will provide needy families with food and other dona-

This year the Culture Club and its student President Autumn Webster have decided to adopt a record number of families this year.

"In past years we had three or four families, and this year we have seven," Webster said.

Webster finds the increased number of families a worthy goal for her and her Culture Club members.

90 day stay, study done by OHA Board

By Dawn Walschinski Kalihwisaks

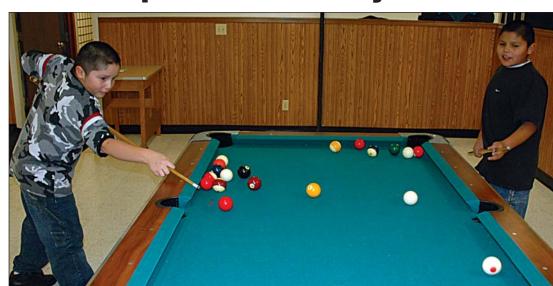

The Oneida Housing Authority (OHA) will continue to fund two positions as part of a drug elimination program, however, certain aspects of the positions may change.

OHA Board Chairman Mark Stanchick addressed those attending a community meeting held at the Oneida Business Committee Conference Room December

"We're probably going to have to retitle them, and restructure the duties to make them more following the drug elimination educational proguidelines," gram Stanchick.

The two Community Coordinator positions, occupied by Richard "Breezy" Brzezinski and Isabel Parker, were initially dissolved by the OHA executive director due to concerns of duplication of services and a lack of direct anti-drug and alcohol programming as required by a

On December 17, the Oneida Nation will unveil the Pride Era Monument in front of the Resch Entertainment Center in the Village of Ashwaubenon.

It is this monument that will honor Oneida's integral part in the beginnings of football in Green Bay.

Mother and daughter team Sandi and Corrie Campbell designed the eight foot black granite pillar as part of the Walk of Fame, which will consist of 24 monuments spread around the Lambeau Field neighborhood.

"People will say ... 'Is (your favorite monument) Brett Favre, Bart Star?' Not really, for us, this is the big one," said Corrie who is in charge of the artistic element of the structures.

Grinch thwarted by area generosity

By Dawn Walschiski Kalihwisaks

The American Indian Center of the Fox Valley (AIC) was hit by the Grinch over the Thanksgiving holiday when someone stole nearly $500 in gifts from the center located at 128 N. Oneida Street in downtown Appleton.

According to Program Director Becky Elder, a water leak in the building caused damage to the locked room where the gifts were being stored in plastic bags. Workers moved the gifts to the hallway so they could dry out the offices.

"It was during that time someone came in and took our Christmas gifts, and so we were without anything," said Elders.

The gifts were to be distributed to children during the center's holiday party on Thursday, December 14.

However, after reports of the incident appeared in the local media, Native and non-Native community members stepped up to replace what to consider case on NY Oneida Indian Nation WASHINGTON (AP) _

The Supreme Court on Monday refused to consider the case of the Oneida Indian Nation, whose gaming compact with New York was invalidated by state courts.

A group of New York residents, the Upstate Citizens for Equality, has challenged the compact and said Monday's decision "calls into immediate question" operation of the tribe's Turning Stone Resort and Casino, which attracts over 4 million visitors a year.

State courts concluded New York's governor exceeded his authority under state law in 1993 by entering into the gaming compact with the tribe without legislative approval.

The Oneidas say the state court rulings conflict with the tribe's federally protected sovereign immunity. The New York courts ruled that even though the Oneidas cannot be made a party in the lawsuit the citizens' group brought against the state, the courts could go ahead and litigate the tribe's interests because the tribe can waive its sovereign immunity and enter the case if it chooses.

The tribe asked the Supreme Court to consider the state courts' rulings in the context of federally protected sovereign immunity for Indian tribes and the federal interest in tribal economic development.

"Indian gaming is the business of the federal government, and it is not for a state court to interfere with it," the Oneidas said Monday in a statement maintaining the legality of their compact under federal law.

The Oneidas have applied the U.S. Interior Department to put all 18,000 acres the tribe owns in two counties in central New York state into federal trust, a status that could bring full or partial sovereignty and exempt the tribe from taxes. Taxes are the most contentious issue between the tribe and area residents and governmental Several people also donated items such as blankets, games and toys to replace the stolen gifts.

"Two little Forest County Potawatomi girls ... took their allowance, and went to the Dollar Store, and they brought in a couple of bags of gifts that we can give out at the party." said Elders.

In total, the AIC received nearly $4000 in cash and gift donations which allows them to expand the scope of their gift giving to include families, and provides funds for clients' programs such as bus passes and gas vouchers.

"I just think it's overwhelming, the compassion and generosity that the people have shared, it just really shows the true spirit of the people, it's incredible," said Elders. "The Grinch didn't lot more people need our help so we're just taking on that challenge to see if we can actually do it this year," Webster explained.

The adoption effort is a community wide drive to get people to give this holiday season.

"What we do is get donations from people around the school or community or whatever and we ask them if they can donate food or anything to help these families,"

Webster said.

Webster is a senior and has three years of prior experience with adopting families. She has been helping with the annual event since she was a freshman. However, this year will be her first when it comes to delivering the food to the families.

The donations will be delivered the third week of December. The Culture Club will be accepting donations through the

The National Indian Gaming Commission said last year it had no plans to shut down the gambling operation, but it also noted that the issue remains unresolved and urged the state of New York to act quickly to resolve the it.

A spokeswoman for Gov. George Pataki said the state has repeatedly urged the federal government to address the issue. "Today we renew that call," Suzanne Morris said Monday.

A similar suit against the Akwesasne Mohawk Casino reached the state Court of Appeals, which ruled the 1993 Mohawk agreement was illegal because the state Legislature had not ratified it. Lawmakers ratified the agreement while the casino kept operating.

An attorney for the citizens group challenging the compact urged state officials to act quickly, saying the high court's refusal to hear the Oneidas' case "calls into immediate question the continued validity of the operation of the Turning Stone Casino."

"Let's see if they've got the guts to enforce the law," Albany attorney Cornelius Murray said.

Oneidas The called attempts to shut down the casino, which employs more than 3,500 people, "reprehensible.'

"That's not a victory and they shouldn't be celebrating," the tribe's statement said. "If we follow the UCE's lead there would be no economic development in upstate New York.'

In Loving Memory of...

Etwin M. Hi

on his birthday...December 6th

Happy Birthoay Dad

We miss you so much! Wish you were here!

Love, Michelle, Michael & Hailey

In Loving Memory of...

Travis G. Cornelius

who would have been 25 years old today, December 9, I98I here will always be heartache and often a silent tear... Always special memories, of the days that you were here. Remembering you is easy · we do it every day,

But, missing you is a heartache that will never go away.

If tears could build a stairway and memories a lane...

I'd walk right up to heaven and bring you home again.

Travis, you are greatly missed by your family. I can't get over losing you, no matter what I try to do. I'm going to spend my whole life through, remembering you!

> With all of our Love, Family, Aunties, Uncles, & Cousins

In Loving Memory of our Husband and Father

Leslie Danforth

You have been gone for six long years...

Your gentle smile and warm heart will never be forgotten!

Love You Always, Eva, Jerry, Jim and Joanne

who passed away 20 years ago November 19, 1986

Twenty years have come and gone, Since God has called you home...

Twenty years that tears ran freely,

When we are all alone..

The call was sudden,

The shock severe... To part with one we loved so dear!

You bid no one a last farewell, Nor even said good-bye... You were gone before we knew it, And only God knows why.

God gave us the strength to bear it, And courage to face the blow... But what it meant to lose you, No one will ever know!

Sadly missed by his wife Lea and daughters Judy and Deborah with football players from local high schools, colleges, town teams and Oneida athletes returning to the area from Carlisle Indian School in Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

"They would come back here from Carlisle and bring all of the skills, prolific skills, that they learned under coach Pop Warner back to these teams in Green Bay," said

At least five Oneida players were on the original team; Wilson Charles, Tom Skenandore, Martin Wheelock and Jonas Metoxen. Tom Skenandore was the first paid player of the semi-pro era, earning $25 for his athletic skill.

The Pride Monument will have a different shape than the other structures."The base form of the Era Monument is trapezoid," Corrie explained. "The trapezoid was a formation that was utilized throughout the duration of this period and beyond."

The granite will have photos from the era etched into its surface. Finding images that have survived the centuries was a struggle for the Campbells. "It's like being a history detective," said Corrie.

The pair worked with Oakley Arnold at the Oneida Museum for photos and with Judy Jourdan of Oneida Culture Heritage genealogical information of the players' descendants. They then turned to Barb Skenandore to find photos of Wilson Charles and John Webster.

"She truly is the picture lady," said Sandi.

"They told me they were looking for pictures of Oneida athletes ... and that they were looking for a picture of John Webster, so I went over to my desk" said Skenandore. "I said 'is this what you're looking for?' I held it up and she said 'Oh, my God, we came to the right place."

Skenandore didn't have a photo of Wilson Charles, but knew the family and was able to get two images of Wilson as well as two of Buster Charles from their descendants. Once the photos were scanned into her computer, Corrie began the long process of fixing the damage caused by the years.

"You lighten these images way up, up comes all of the stuff, there might be a scratch in it from 1901, you can see it," she said. Corrie and Sandi believe all their hard work will be worth it when they see the reactions of the family members at the unveiling the morning before the Packer-Jets game. "That's what I can't wait to see ... when they come to visit and see this and be proud of it, for us, that's the key." said Sandi.

Skenandore is looking forward to the educational aspect of the monument. "There's so many people out there that don't know, they're not informed on the Oneidas and how athletic they were," she said. "I think (the monument is) a great thing, because our ancestors need to honored."

Artist is accomplished in a variety of mediums

By Steven J. Gandy Kalihwisaks

Judy Jourdan is truly a jack-of-all-trades when it comes to artwork, but unlike the cliche', she has managed to master many of the art

In addition to working fulltime as an Administrative Assistant/Genealogist Cultural Heritage, Jourdan also spends about 30 hours a week working on any number of art projects.

Corn husk dolls, quilting, painting, photography and even stone work are some of the art mediums that Jourdan has pursued as an artist, but she may be most recognized for her doll making.

"That's kind of been a main stay, I sometimes go off on other tangents but I always come back to the doll making," Jourdan said.

Don't think that doll making is her favorite thing to do, though.

"I have no favorites, what ever I pick up and start to do is my favorite at the time," Jourdan quips.

Jourdan's work has been displayed in exhibits all over North America. Her work has been in the Smithsonian, Royal Ontario Museum in Canada and she currently has an exhibit at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Colorado is Pam Aloisa, and through the arts program she is the reason Jourdan's work is on display out there.

"A friend of ours, Jim Overman ... had called out there looking for someone else and she happened to be looking for a Native American Artist to do an exhibit at the gallery and asked him if he knew anyone and he referred me. So I'm very grateful, I need every little bit of help I can get," Jourdan said. "(The exhibit is) 20 pieces, in 4 different categories. I have some drawings and paintings,

Metoxen pleads no contest to reduced charge

By Steven J. Gandy

Kalihwisaks Police Oneida Commissioner Gary Metoxen pled no contest to an ordinance violation at an initial appearance court in Outagamie court on November 28, 2006.

According to the criminal complaint filed with the Outagamie County Sheriff's Department, two officers from the Oneida Police Department responded to a disturbance at the Metoxen residence on September 19.

As the officers were leaving, Metoxen's wife ran out of the house and stated that the defendant had "lunged" at her, tried to take her keys and in the process scratched her.

Metoxen paid $154.50 in forfeiture and court costs.

some dolls, some of the raised bead work and some ceramics. They paid for all the shipping. Pam curated the exhibit and she's gotten some very nice comments on my work."

Jourdan's exhibit has been up since mid October and is slated to be up until December 16.

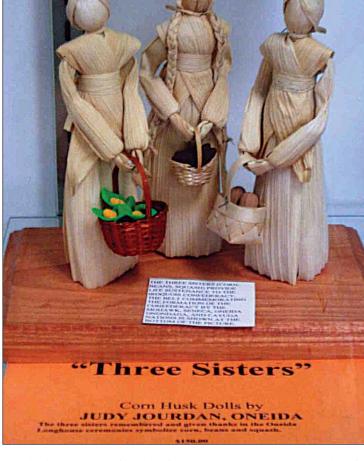

According to Jourdan, it's not easy to clarify when she actually began doing art work, "I've done artwork all of my life, so it's kinda hard to pinpoint a starting point. Ever since I was little I picked up a pencil and it was

She does know that she still has the desire to learn new crafts and to teach what she knows to others.

"I'm always doing more research on different things and looking up things on the internet and trying to push myself a little bit more," The Gallery Director in Jourdan said. "I teach classes through the Tsyunhehkwa center, (and) sometimes through the Community Education Center. Also, I've done classes at the Mitchell Museum and the Neville."

Jourdan works out of her home and sells most of her pieces on a custom order basis. She does have some pieces available for sale at Bear Paw Keepsakes, but she generally prefers to sell her work herself.

"I have al lot of requests to put work in the museum gift shop, and some of the other local places, but I just don't have time to keep one step ahead of the sales. I make a better income on the commission sales than I do on putting things in retail venues," Jourdan explains.

Although there is no doubt that Jourdan is an accomplished artist, there was a time when she felt uncomfortable calling herself that.

"I did all this stuff for years and years and years, but I was very self conscious about calling myself an artist. I felt like I didn't really pay my dues, I suppose. There's some kind of weird philosophy that if you don't suffer for your work your not...ya know," Jourdan said with a laugh.

Jourdan aspires to someday be able to do her art full-

"I would love to see it become my only source of income. To be able to just stay home and do that, I wouldn't have a problem with that at all, but being discovered takes such a long time," Jourdan concluded.

LIVE recording set for Flying Feather Band at Menominee

Submitted By Richie Plass

I just wanted to let everyone know that I've set everything up for us to make a, "LIVE Recording". When we perform next month at our casino (Menominee Casino in Keshena, WI) on December 20-23. We'll be doing a "LIVE" recording on Friday evening, December 22nd. We're really excited about it, especially since we'll have Wade (Fernandez) playing with us.

But the added treat is that we will be backing up one of our tribal elders, Ted "Boogie" Conger. Boogie is 73 years old and plays like he's a teenager.

We're planning on recording the whole evening (about 4 hours) so we should have some good, "stuff" to pick from. If all goes well we hope to have the CD out by January or February 2007.

So, if you live close by, come on out and help us. If you're not able to be there in person, not to worry. We're really hoping that by midwinter we'll have some, "LIVE" music everyone can grant funding one of the positions. However, the OHA Board of Commissioners initiated a 90 day stay and an independent study after public outcry over the move.

The community meeting was a result of a petition started by Taina Bain for a General Tribal Council (GTC) meeting concerning the positions. Attendance fell short of the 75 people required for an official GTC meeting.

"The program has helped my children with outfit making, and drumming, and doing different things in the community, which kept them occupied and off the streets," said Bain who is the mother of four children.

Stanchick responded that the positions were written with an anti-drug and alcohol mission, but the programs "are doing more of a wraparound after school program."

However. community members in attendance countered that activities such as outfit making, drum classes, field trips and movie nights fostered an anti-drug and alcohol atmosphere.

"The activities that the two coordinators of those programs did role modeled positive behavior, positive social interaction, and alternatives to drugs and alcohol," said Sherrole Benton.

Others argued that while programs such as Oneida Recreation and the Oneida Nation School System offered after school activities, availability is limited.

"They only have so many spots allotted for these programs," said Bain.

Stanchick stated the program may expand its hours to be available everyday, rather than the current schedule of Tuesday through Saturday from noon to 8:00pm.

Chairman Gerald Danforth

For this article I'd like to address the Tribe's recent property purchase in the Northern part of the Oneida Reservation adjacent to Hwy 29. Tom Juza, former owner of the property and a wellknown developer in the area approached the tribe offering to sell the land in question. Negotiations between Juza Chairman's Corner...

Division Management personnel resulted in the initial purchase of 17.4 acres of a larger parcel totaling 43.08 acres, which is owned by Juza and is called "Golden Pond Park" (please see the corresponding map). Included in the purchase agreement is a conservation easement on the remainder of the property, and the option to purchase the remainder of the property should it become available for sale in the Hobart officials allege in their press release dated November 27, 2006, that the configuration of the property purchased by the tribe contained "spite-stripes" and that this purchase was "deceitful, counter productive and obnoxious." In my view, that simply is not true. Oneida purchased the land that the owner made available for sale and we secured the adjoining part of the land in its present state under a conservancy easement.

Why is this property important to Oneida? The property is located in, and contains a significant portion Thornberry Creek Watershed. The Oneida Water Resources Team has a large volume of data on this stream and has devoted an enormous amount of time and energy to protecting it. Thornberry Creek has the highest water quality and is the most pristine stream on the Oneida Reservation. This stream is a Class I Trout Stream and has the only naturally reproducing population of Brook Trout in all of Brown County. For example, when surveying for trout stream classification, sixtythree brook trout were collected from up stream of Forest Drive alone. It is certain that residential development on this property, as was previously intended, would have disastrous affects to these environmental characteristics for many generations to come.

Compared to the residential development that was being considered for this location, Oneida has a different opinion about how this part of the reservation should be used (described above). I don't believe however, that our intentions are "deceitful, counterproductive, or obnox-

Hobart cites pending lawsuits with Oneida regarding similar actions. "O'Hare Blvd." is a lawsuit initiated by Hobart in 2003 with the intention of condemning tribal property. A year ago this month, after a series of three Oneida-Hobart government to government meetings, both Oneida and Hobart elected officials reached an agreement to settle this case. In general, we agreed that Oneida would finish the road, own the road, maintain the road and approve necessary easements on that road. All that remained was for the attorneys to work out the technical details, which we all agreed could be completed by January 2006. The last draft of the agreement was sent from Oneida Law Office to Hobart's attorney in January Hobart also references the abandoned railroad bed property. This lawsuit initiated by Hobart, again contains the issue of Hobart's intention to condemn tribal land. The reasoning - because Oneida blocked several requests for easements across this property. The fact is, in the past year there have been two easement applications by Hobart residents, one request was denied and one request was approved. Each application is processed on its merits.

Hobart suggests that Oneida intentions of this land purchase is to block their access to other property in northern Hobart. The process for easement applications is administered by the Division of Land Management. This process was explained to Hobart in great detail. At this point, Hobart has not submitted an application for any easement.

Oneida has made public for many years, our intention to reacquire our reservation land as it becomes available. We have entered into agreements with the affected local governments to mitigate the financial burden associated with these reacquired lands when they are placed in trust status. We have also worked through many mutually agreed upon zoning and jurisdictional issues.

I can think of many examples where we have taken ownership of our reservation land and made significant improvements to it. I can't think of even one example to the contrary.

Sincerely, Gerald L. Danforth, Chairman Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin

Greetings,

FY 2006 Budget

The FY2006 FY2006 Budget Meeting General Tribal Council consideration held on July Saturday, 2005. However, due to a lack of quorum, Business Committee approved the FY2006 Budget at the August 10, 2005 Special Meeting.

The FY2006 Fiscal Year came to an end on September 30th, 2006. The organization has closed out all expenses for the year and is working to complete the audit. The audit is expected to be completed by mid January. The preliminary September 30, 2006 Treasurer's Report was presented on December 6th to Oneida Business Committee.

FY2007 Budget The FY2007 Budget was presented at the Saturday September 16th General Tribal Council Meeting. A quorum was established and the budget was approved by General Tribal Council. The first month of the fiscal year has closed and the organization is off to a good start with a positive variance of $5.7 million compared to budget.

Annual Report

The Oneida Tribe's Annual Meeting is scheduled for January 1, 2007 at 6:00pm in the Business Committee Conference Room located at the Norbert Hill Center. I encourage everyone to attend even though it is a holiday. Also, please take some time to review the financial information provided in this year's annual report. We have changed the format to include the Finance and Accounting area's within the Treasurer's Report to General Tribal Council. Another new feature of this year's report is an update on venture fund projects and investments. If you have feedback or comments on this year's financial information, please feel free to contact my office at (920) 869-4360 as we are always looking to improve the delivery of this information to the membership.

Elections

I would like to congratulate

Mercie Danforth

recently elected government officials in the recent election. Mr. Jim Doyle was reelected as the State's Governor, Dr. Steve Kagen was elected as Congressman of the 8th congressional district, and Tom Nelson was re-elected to the House of Representative. Congratulations to all of the elected state and local officials and thank you to all of those who assisted with the Get Out the Vote events that led up to the election and a big THANK YOU to those who have went out and voted.

Land Purchases

General Tribal Council approved a resolution that set forth a goal to buy back a certain percentage of our reservation by a specific year, this is known as our 20/20 plan. This plan has been in place since 1998. The Tribe has made known for a long time our intention to repurchase the land within our reservaand our Land Commission has been the designated entity to accomplish this plan.

The Village of Hobart has stated recently that they are not happy with one of our recent purchases and in a press release they identified that this purchase was "deceitful and counterproductive". Unfortunately, the Village chooses to act in the manner they are condemning by specifically not giving a complete picture to the public in their press release.

The Business Committee has been trying to work with the Village of Hobart Board to create an avenue for us to come together to discuss these types of issues. Unfortunately these issues have not been brought up to address. We can not solve problems if the Village does not want to work with us to do

In a recent example, we had a meeting scheduled with the Village and with no explanation as to why, the Village of Hobart cancelled that meeting. This would have been an opportune time to discuss the land purchase issue and work something out. Instead we are informed of their frustration via a news reporter.

I feel that the Village of Hobart made some negative assumptions and overreacted in regards to this purchase. The Village President has our phone numbers and has been informed a number of times that he can contact us if he sees there are problems. Working these issues out in a government-to-government manner, at a professional level, through face-to-face discussion is in all our best interests. But he chose to react through the media and by threats of litigation and by stating that instead of working cooperatively, the Village will act in a spiteful manner. At some point in time the Village of Hobart has to come to a realization that we, the Oneida Tribe, are not going anywhere. Certainly we realize that the Village of Hobart, which is located within the reservation boundaries, is not going anywhere. We both need to work together to discuss and resolve these issues. Utilizing the taxpayer's money in litigation is not making that right decision and in the end simply results in higher taxes and an inability to address needed citizen issues. Especially when all it down and discussing the issues. I am a member of the Oneida Nation, I am an elected official of the Oneida Nation Government, a taxpaying resident of Hobart, I live within the State of Wisconsin and I am considered a citizen of the United States of America. I have many areas of responsibility and I know that nothing can be resolved by throwing tantrums, calling the media or going to court. Both our governments will be here forever with no resolution if we continue down this path. Let's sit down and discuss this and any other issue with a solution-

The Holiday Season is upon us once again. I would like to extend a safe and Happy Holiday wishes to you and your families.

Your comments and questions are always encouraged and most welcome. We can not continue to improve without your input. Please feel free to contact any of the Business Committee Members at (920) 869-4364, or toll free 1-800-236-2214.

Oneida Nation delegation report on Terra Madre conference

Respectfully submitted by Chairman Gerald Danforth Councilman Paul Ninham Jeff Metoxen Jill Martus-Ninham

We respectfully submit this travel report to the Oneida Nation community regarding the Terra Madre - Slow Food Conference held in Turin, Italy October, 26 through October 30, 2006.

To begin, the Slow Food Movement was founded by a gentleman named Carlo Petrini in resistance to the opening of a McDonald's fast food restaurant in Rome's historic Piazza Spagna district in 1986. Since then, Slow Food has grown into a world wide movement that defends "gastronomy" (gastronomy is engaging all human senses: touch, smell, feel, taste and listening in the preparation and consumption of good food). Slow Food, an organization dedicated to the preservation and enjoyment of traditional and artisanal foods and the advocacy of sustainability, now exists in over 104 countries with more than 80,000 members (sustainability is integrating available natural resources into a system that respects and promotes the ecological balance within the natural life cycles). Through it's members and it's local chapters, or convivia, Slow Food promotes taste education, conserves agricultural biodiversity and organizes events (biodiversity is respect and nurturing of all life forces to perpetuate balance in all aspects of food production, harvesting, preparing and consuming). Its publishing house issues guides, recipe books, maga-

Through this report and subsequent articles, we will be introducing terms and concepts that we have become familiar with over the past several years as we move forward as a sustainable "food community". A food community is a physically identifiable entity that holds values, interests, and common purposes and which is engaged in seed saving, harvesting, breeding, animal husbandry, farming, fishing, food processing, food distribution, marketing, education and other eco-gastronomic activities, in order to bring smallscale, quality food products to zines and essays on food culconsumers. Terra Madre, mother earth in Italian, first took place October 20-23, 2004, in the Palazzo del Lavoro in Turin. 5000, delegates representing 1,200 food communities from 130 countries convened at the event, including farmers, breeders, fishermen, processors, distributors, cooks and agricultural experts. Jeff Metoxen and Jill Martus-Ninham attended this first ever gathering of world food communities and returned with invaluable information from a world-wide perspective. They not only participated at Terra Madre, but also presented in a workshop the importance of sustainability as it pertains to Oneida's heirloom white corn.

The second edition of Terra Madre was organized in partnership with the Ministry of Forestry and Agricultural Policy, the Italian Cooperation for Development of the Ministry of Foreign the Piedmont affairs, Regional Authority and the City of Turin. This event coincided with Slow Food's Salone del Gusto, the fore-

Carlo Petrini, founder of the Slow Food movement, addressing 7,000 conference attendees during opening ceremonies.

Food Sovereignty is the right of peoples, communities and countries to define their own agricultural, labor, fishing, food and land policies which are ecologically, socially, economically and culturally appropriate to their unique circumstances. It includes the true right to food and to produce food, which means that all people have the right to safe, nutritious and culturally appropriate food and to food-producing resources and the ability to sustain themselves and society.

most international quality food event. Over 7,000 people from 150 countries, 1500 food communities, 1000 cooks and 200 universities from all over the world attended the Slow Food Conference. These delegates represented the three elements that make up the world of food: the traditional and practical knowledge of producers, the experience and creativity of cooks and the insight of science and research. Chairman Danforth and Councilman Ninham were invited by Winona LaDuke to participate in this years Terra Madre as part of the forty-six individuals that comprised the North American Indigenous delegation. Winona LaDuke is an Anishinaabeg woman and the founding director of White Earth Land Recovery Project (WELRP). She is also an environmental activist and renown author of numerous books regarding Indigenous Peoples. Ms. LaDuke invited the Chairman and Councilman to primarily assist the Indigenous delegation with input for strategies to recover traditional, indigenous and unique food traditions from a policy stand point. Also to work with other Indigenous producers who have been collaborating on issues of food production, seed saving, community food system growth and globalization to coalesce our communities with comparable allies internationally (globalization is the process by which social institutions become adopted on a global scale). The invitation for Oneida Nation participation from WELRP was a result of grant funding. Just opportunity to caucus during the event. This opportunity allowed the delegation to bring forward issues that each community faces. The delegation separated into three groups to develop strategies to support our diverse geographic backgrounds and address common challenges. The sub-group topics are:

- 1) Seed Sovereignty Alliance: Seed Sovereignty Declaration, Resolutions
- 2) Bio-Piracy: Protection of
- Native Resources 3) Slow Food/Heifer Project/RAFT: Project Development

Participating in the world meeting was an honor that brings responsibility. It is expected that Chairman Danforth and Councilman Ninham will raise the level of awareness of sustainable food communities within Indian Country. In addition, they will bring forward tribal and public policy that supports the protection of indigenous foods and resources at the level of the National Congress American Indians and other international organizations.

The responsibility of the delegation will go beyond the caucus meetings. A commitment was made to continue the work simultaneously in our respective communities while maintaining a strong level of communication. This will support the various degrees of capacity building achieved and needed in each community. As diverse as our nations are, the same goes for our geographical representation. The delegation was made up of various organizations from across Turtle Island; Gitigaaning Garden The forty-six member Project at Bad River Indigenous delegation had the Wisconsin, White Earth Land Recovery Project on the White Earth Reservation in Minnesota, Native Seeds/Search in Tucson, Arizona, Taos County Economic Development Center in New Mexico, Traditional Native American Farmers Association based in Tesuque Pueblo, New Mexico and Arizona and Heifer Project International to name a few.

The Oneida community will realize the efforts of the caucus. The Oneida delegation will deliver the message home and relate the issues, goals, concepts and challenges specific to the Oneida community. The most immediate result will culminate in the "Oneida Sovereignty Initiative". This initiative is built around choices. Choices that are specific to holistic health. "Food Sovereignty is the right of peoples, communities and countries to define their own agricultural, labor, fishing, food and land policies which are ecologically, socially, economically and culturally appropriate to their unique circumstances. It includes the true right to food and to produce food, which means that all people have the right to safe, nutritious and culturally appropriate food and to foodproducing resources and the ability to sustain themselves and society". Food Sovereignty; A Right for All. Political Statement of the NGO/CSO Forum for Food Sovereignty, 13 June 2002, Rome The "Oneida Food Sovereignty Initiative" will processes include promise to empower community members and restore food sovereignty for the Oneida Nation. The overarching issue of the Initiative will address, as previously mentioned, health. Our community is battered by dia-and obesity that is directly effected by the foods we consume. It is for this reason that we wish to re-establish a sustainable food community based upon our traditional

Next Steps...

By utilizing our community resources, we plan to host a "Local Food Summit". A local food summit will become the vehicle in which the community will be made aware of the components of a healthy food community. We will present and discuss the basics of; food sovereignty, food security, food community, genetically engineered and genetically modified organisms and how they pertain to large corporations such as Monsanto, seed sovereignty, pesticides and fertilizers versus organic. We hope to conduct the Local Food Summit in the spring of 2007 and will promote healthy community foods through healthy community gardens.

Another initiative for the Oneida delegation is to report and present to the Great Lakes Intertribal Council, a consortium of all the tribes in Wisconsin. We will present the concept of food sovereignty and promote a "traditional foods day" in Oneida where all eleven tribes can gather, prepare and honor healthy foods that are indigenous to their respective reservation. The Oneida delegation also plans to work with OCIFS, the Oneida Community Integrated Food System, and hopes to play an integral part in furthering their mission to provide healthy, local foods to the Oneida Community. We will also engage Oneida Living in Balance (OLB) a grass roots organization comprised of community members, and led by Sylvia Cornelius-Waupoose, that raised the awareness of food sovereignty over the past year and have been instrumental in providing healthy, locally produced foods into our school system.

We look forward to our next article in which we will report the progress of the "Oneida Food Sovereignty Initiative" and provide information on the importance of "Seed Sovereignty". We will inform the community of an initiative from Tesuque Pueblo of New Mexico and the resolution put forward by Governor Gil Vigil to the National Congress of American Indians on behalf of the Eight Northern Indian Pueblo Council as it pertains to seed sovereignty.

SEOTS hosts Harvest Feast and bingo

Photo courtesy of Jim Kelly Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services Harvest Feast was held at the Marian Center for Non-Profits on 3195 S Superior Street. The Gym and kitchen was for us to use for the afternoon with about 70 people attending with plenty of food to go around. Students from UWM were also there to enjoy this time with us. It was potluck along with the turkeys and some-fixin's that were donated by SEOTS. After dinner we enjoyed a few games of bingo before leaving to go home.

It was a very enjoyable afternoon to have dinner with many community members and the hope of seeing them for future events. I would like to extend our gratitude for the World Famous Bingo Caller, "Huston Wheelock" for the fine job he did for

American Indian Task Force on Domestic Violence

"Helping the community navigate the system, help with resources and educate youth, families and elder about domestic violence is a goal of the American Indian Task Force on Domestic Violence," states Oneida Tribal Member Charlene Smith.

Oneida Tribal Member, Charlene Smith (RN) along with seven other Native American community members serve on a subcommittee the Milwaukee Commission on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault. The Milwaukee Commission saw a need to diversify and for the first time in history it now has 32 diversified agencies with subcommittees that serve on the Milwaukee Commission on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault. Diversified representatives serving on the subcommittee are professionals and community members throughout the city. The American Indian Task Force works with the specialized agencies, including the Milwaukee Police Department's Sensitive Crime

The American Indian Task Force on Domestic Violence, Assault Sexual Population Vulnerable (AITF) started out as a focus group in the 1990's. In the year 2000 three cities were targeted to launch a Safe Night Program for youth and families. This was a pilot program that was to host an informational night about personal safety, such as street smarts, dating and relation-One of the Safe Night's held invited guest speaker Police Chief David Clark from the Milwaukee Sheriff's Department to give some encouraging words to the youth. Before and after the speaker there was music, food, fun, prizes and a movie about safe dating. Safe Night is a success that is still carrying on into 2006.

One other program held is an Annual Dinner and Dialogue. A major focus is to present and educate the community about our Native cultural teachings and practices that were used in the past and in the present. Professional service providers come to the dinner as guests to hear a Native guest speaker such as past Chief of the Cherokee present issues Domestic Nation Wilma Mankiller and National speaker Peggy Bird, regarding Violence. Understanding cultural needs and practices will lend respect to the Native population for professionals that handle domestic violent cases. Discussion, questions and answers from the audience help all to understand needs that others may have. This has eventually directed some of the attendees to help find needs to feel safe about whom to go to for information when dealing with this sensitive subject. The Task Force is there to help them find the person they need to call, where to get help, find a safe place and sometime find the right person to accompany them to file a restraint. There is not a discrimination of age, sexual orientation, women, men, children, persons with disabilities and elders. Because of this the name, the Task Force now includes this vulnerable population in the title. Therefore, the name now is American Indian Task Force on Domestic Violence, Assault Vulnerable Population. name that includes all. The Task Force conducts meetings at area agencies including Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services. They start out with a prayer, updates, and discussion on new business. The subcommittee reaches out to the community helping when needed. The members are Oneida, Ojibwa, Menominee and Ottawa. Each member is responsive when called upon to connect those in need to various agencies to promote and facilitate a better outcome. They have presented at seminars, events, Wisconsin Professional Social Workers Association and even at the County Court

The American Indian Task Force is applying for nonprofit status, with the hopes of one day having a shelter for abused family members. "There are grants out there for special needs and we want to fill that need" says Charlene. The current Commissioner Bagwajikwe Madosh of the American Indian Task Force has a passion to help the Native population, specifically the youth states "Reaching our children are important, so it will be safer for them."

Students pass bills in mock Senate

By Debbie Santiago, ONHS junior

On Thursday, November in the Business Committee conference room, the ONHS civics class had a "Mock Senate."

Students duplicated the process of the U.S. senate by passing bills and introducing bills.

The students all wrote a couple bills that they wanted to pass "just for fun" though the process was a formal one.

Once the bills were introduced, the class was split into different committees like social issues, school issues, and food issues. From there the groups "killed" or passed on for debated the bills they liked and disliked.

Then, we took the activity to the BC conference room, the same place that our tribal government does it discussion and decision-making.

There, the bills were brought in front of the whole class where we decided as a whole to pass, kill, or bring that bill back to the committees for further discussion.

Posing as actual senators from various states, the students actually had to stand up in front the room and present their bills and defend them while other "Senators" commented on why they liked it, why they thought a bill should be passed, or why they didn't like it killed.

It was a fun experience because we actually got the feel of how bills are passed and become laws or

> Senate Bill School Should Start at 10am by Debbie Santiago

ONHS junior

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representative of the 2 United States of America in Congress assembled, school should 3 start at 10:00am. The school says that we have such an

4 attendance problem, but it's because kids don't like to get up 5 at 5 6 in the morning just to go to school. If school started 6 later in the day then I think that more students would show 7 up and actually be on time. For some kids it's too hard to 8 concentrate that early in the morning when they can't even 9 think. So school starting at 10am would solve at least 10 problems.

> Senate Bill Community Service by Debbie Santiago ONHS junior

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representative of the 2 United States of America in Congress assembled, if a kid gets a 3 ticket they should be able do community service for the ticket 4 instead of having to pay the fine. If a kid doesn't have a job 5 then how are they suppose to pay it. Then they give the kid a 6 certain amount of days to pay it but that still isn't enough. 7 I just think it's dumb to give a kid a fine that they know they 8 can't pay, and the parents won't pay so they know it's not 9 going to get payed. So if they just give the kids community 10 service then they are giving back to the community and also 11 working off their fine.

We're playing basketball

By Nick Cantu

The boys basketball season is off to a rough start because there are only about eight players who are eligible to play due to grades and other athletic code issues.

Overall the team should be pretty good this year having only lost a couple of seniors, Scott Lynk, and Anthony Gutierrez.

Both the boys and girls travel to Kohler, Wisconsin this weekend for the annual Kohler Tourney.

On December 12, the boys travel to Keshena for our traditional rival game.

The Thunderhawks have a talented starting five: juniors Truman Powless and Nick Cantu and seniors Darrell Skenandore, Freddie Hernandez and Joe Christjohn.

Those players should be able to hold their own until senior Gavin Hill returns after the first four games. At that point, it will be Truman, Nick, Darrell, Joe and Frank Clary or Dylan Wheelock fighting for the open starting spot.

It will be close, but right now it looks like Frank might get the 5th spot.

The boys should be able to keep their record over .500 this year. Obviously that means winning more games than they lose, but it's a decent goal for the squad.

The boys should dominate most games on defense this year because they work hard at practice on defensive techniques. The one thing the boys can't do on defense is reach in. It's been a hard habit to break since it seems to be something they all like to do.

"Happy feet" really moves

By Shaina Powless

ONHS sophomore

What a good movie for kids and, even, adults.

I'm talking about "Happy Feet", of course.

I took my 6-year old nephew to see it and he just loved it. I also liked it.

The movie was full of funny jokes and good music.

"Happy Feet" is about penguins singing to find a mate for themselves. But for "Mumble Happy Feet" this was not sooooo easy. Mumble was dropped when he was still in his egg shell. This caused him to not have good singing skills like the rest of the penguins. Instead, he had the talent to move his feet fast to the beat of music. His feet moved almost as if he was tap dancing.

His fellow penguins would sort of despise him for his fast, active feet.

But when Mumble met a different species of penguins, Mexican penguins, he found new friends. When he heard music and his feet started moving, his buddies thought that he was really cool. Mumble and his friends go on an adventure to find out why their fish supply for food is so low. So, they go to find humans. Mumble ends up getting most of the way on his own, but is put into a zoo.

When he moves his feet, he sees that the humans really like it. So, the humans let him go back, but, Mumble has a tracking device on his back. When he meets up with his friends and family, the humans find him and all the penguins who once despised him for his feet are now dancing along with him. The humans see this and work on giving them more fish to eat.

In a classic case of "boy gets girl," Mumble then gets together with his childhood sweetheart and they are all happy.

Like I said before, this is a very good movie to see. Take your younger siblings or nieces and nephews. You'll all have a good time.

Social Issues Native Americans Face Today

Martin Stevens Jr.

ONHS sophomore

Today Native Americans face problems like poverty, obs, alcohol, drugs and many other problems. Some tribes have more better things in life like the casinos which were some get their "per cap." So have casinos but there casinos don't make much, so they don't get much back. Not only that, but more than half of natives have bad land which they can't farm or plant much. The reason for this is cause the whites pushed us here and gave us bad land which they didn't want. The drugs and alcohol also don't help much.

Most Southwestern Natives live on poor lands with no good jobs that pay much, so when they do get their checks, they take it to the liquor store and buy liquor, of course. That or they go buy drugs. Today we are fighting to gain our language back because only so many can speak fluently. We are like this also because when our great-grandparents were taken to boarding schools every time they spoke their language, they got beaten, hit and some were even molested. Then they were sent home. Most of them didn't remember their language, so they had to learn it back slowly. Then they tried to teach it to our grandparents, which then tried to teach it to our parents which they didn't try as hard as our grandparents to teach it to us. Now there are native schools out there that are teaching to their kids there the language of their tribe.

For in order for you to be Native, you at least need to be one-fourth of a tribe to be on the rolls. The reason why this is because the white people said so. If we could go further on the percentage we would have a lot more people on the rolls that are Native American.

By Eldon Powless

ONHS sophomore

Native Americans face a lot of social issues today. They face alcoholism. They face poverty because of what white people did to us. They stripped us of our land, our culture, and our language. They took our land and put us on reservations. When they found out that the land they put us on was rich with resources they took that land and put us on crappier land.

Then they gave us food. But the food they gave us was rotten. They introduced us to alcohol and disease. They gave us blankets and other stuff with small pox infested on it. They also introduced us to fatty foods. That's why today a lot of native people have Diabetes. That is why a lot of native people are alcoholics.

The white people took everything we had away from us. After that they copied our government and gave us laws that say we can believe in what we used to believe in.

These are some of the social issues native people face

Time Marches on and so do the numbers

A few years ago we wrote about our numbers and here we are again. The ONCEC GED/PASS/Tutoring section has surpassed the 5,500 mark in enrolled students since June of 1993. Nearly 2,500 students have either received their GED's, High School diplomas or gained credits toward graduation from high school. Chances are strong that you are one of our students or you know someone who is our student. We span the generations; once you enroll, you are enrolled for life. Lifelong learning is our goal for our students.

More and more students are entering post secondary educational institutions.

Thank you in advance for your commitment to the students of the Oneida Nation School System.

Students continue to return to the ONCEC to use computers, do homework, write papers, and get tutoring assistance. We have students from NWTC, Lakeland, UWGB, College of the Menominee, University of Phoenix, Kaplan University, and Capella University just to name a few. The computer section of the ONCEC offers a variety of classes to help the continuing student as well as the student who wants to sharpen skills or learn new skills for the workplace.

While our student enrollment increases, our staff decreases, so you may have to be patient at times when there are several students in need of help at the same time. We are open on Saturday from 9:00 am until 3:00pm to give more time to students who work during the week and are in need of our services. During the week we are open Monday through Thursday from 7:30am to 9:00pm. On Friday we are open from 7:30 AM to 5:30 PM.

Our doors are open. If you haven't visited us lately, stop by. If you had been working on your GED and something stopped you, come back. We will dust off your file and continue on. If you have completed and neglected to let us know give us a call (496-7860) or stop by 2632 S. Packerland. Come see how old some of us have gotten. Remember at the ONCEC you are in a class by yourself!

More minority kids getting adult-type diabetes

By Sheryl Kornman

Tucson Citizen

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) -Marco Melgar, an 11-yearold sixth-grader, has friends with diabetes, but he's looking forward to a lifetime without the deadly disease.

The Tucson boy has learned that exercise and good nutrition will help him avoid becoming a statistic.

In Pima County, thousands of Hispanic and American Indian adults struggle with obesity and the challenges of type 2 diabetes. Hispanics, blacks and American Indians have higher rates of diabetes than whites.

Because of an upswing in the numbers of overweight minority children, more of them are being diagnosed with adult-type diabetes.

It's estimated that at least 40,000 American children now have type 2 diabetes, the type associated with adult

Born genetically programmed to store fat during times of famine, many overweight Hispanics, Indians and blacks develop symptoms of diabetes from a regular diet of low-cost, highcalorie fast food and sodas, coupled with little daily physical activity.

Without changing their diet and activity level, some minority children could spend their lives injecting insulin several times a day or attached to an insulin pump with a needle beneath their skin to regulate blood glu-

Some could die prematurely from the complications of diabetes - kidney failure and heart disease.

Challenger Middle School in Sunnyside Unified School District screens its children for diabetes.

Parents in the predominantly Hispanic south side area are told when a child needs to see a doctor to be tested for diabetes, and the family is referred to publicly funded health clinics.

A free weekly diabetes prevention program aimed at this "medically underserved" minority population is helping teach some of the children how they can try to prevent the onset of diabetes.

"Defeating Diabetes Through Dance and Diet" began last spring as a project University the of Arizona's Center for Health Equality and UA's Mel and Enid Zuckerman College of Public Health.

Challenger School counselors Sagrario Espinosa and Maritza Garlant-Molin coordinated the program with Ada Dieke, 26, a UA masters in public health fellow, who designed and ran it.

After UA funding ran out earlier this month, Girl Scouts of America stepped in with funding to keep the program going.

The free after-school program offers an hour of dance twice a month and an hour of instruction twice a month on healthful meals and tips about diabetes.

Nathaniel Bolivar, 12, a seventh-grader at Challenger, said he took the class because he's at risk for diabetes.

"I just wanted to learn more so you won't get it, and I can help my tata (grandfather) with it. He gets insulin shots," Nathaniel said.

Dieke chose hip-hop for the exercise part of the program to get the kids really moving.

Kaleshia Andrews, 11, a sixth-grader, said she's "been wanting to learn about diabetes so I know."

"My mom (a diabetic) has a machine at home," she said. "I eat a lot of vegetables, but my sister likes hot Cheetos."

Dr. Kurt J. Griffin, a UA assistant professor of pediatrics and a pediatric endocrinologist with University Physicians Healthcare, said he sees more preadolescents with adult-type diabetes, which usually doesn't occur until after age 40.

Diabetic children are showing up at the UA College of Medicine's Steele Children's Research Wing CenterAngel for Children with Diabetes weighing as much as 300 pounds by age 12, he said.

Sherman Garver, research professor at the College of Medicine, studies diabetes and said it's tough, particularly for Hispanics and American Indians, to avoid the weight gain that leads to diabetes.

Historically, "these people were very active all day, farming and walking long distances," he said. "Now they're not. And now they have very calorie-dense foods that they consume - the deep-fat fried breads, the tortillas. They tuck all that fat

"They can't sit around and eat McDonald's. Their bodies are used to the famine, and there is no famine now."

He said adult diabetes in children is "largely preventable."

"Sadly, we see too many children like this now,' Garver said. "For all these kids, the answer is diet and exercise."

Griffin said young people are often not mature enough to understand the risk they face and the importance of a more healthful lifestyle. Even when warned that they could lose kidney function and end up blind and on dialysis for four hours a day three times a week, many still won't change their eating habits or activity level, he

To make an impact on a diabetic child who is at risk, "you have to get tough and hit them where they live," he said. "Take back the cell phone or the video game. These kids need limits, just like toddlers."

STANDING STONE

The Challenger Middle School program invited parents to visit for their own hour of exercise - salsa dancing - after the children's class, but none showed up, the counselors said.

Garver said parents should help their children develop healthful eating habits before they get fat.

And that includes infants, he said.

"Babies as young as 6 months already know what they like to eat. By the time a child is in early adolescence, eating habits are set and difficult to modify."

Griffin said more frequent visits to the pediatrician during early childhood may help prevent diabetes.

"Pediatricians see the kids when they're teeny tiny, and then they don't come in until they need shots for kindergarten, and then they fall off the face of the planet," he

"When the kids come to see me, it's kind of too late."

Give the gift of life... donate at local blood drive

By Steven Gandy

Kalihwisaks

You can help make this holiday season a safer one by giving the gift of life. The last blood drive of the year in Oneida will be held on Friday, December 15 from 8am – 2pm at Oneida Family Fitness. The Blood Drive Committee and the American Red Cross are sponsoring the event and hopes to improve upon the last drives numbers.

Back in September, 27 people donated blood and because of those donations, 81 lives could be saved or helped. Patient need exceeds 900 donations daily in our region and it is up to the Red Cross and its donors to fill those bags.

Employees of the Oneida of Indians Tribe Wisconsin are encouraged to donate their blood. General Debbie Manager, Thundercloud and Gaming Manager, General Cornelius both have expressed their support for this initiative . Tribal Resolution #4-5-95 allows for two hours of paid time off - authorized by a departmentered and completes the screening on the day of the blood drive.

Applications now available for communitybased economic development funding

MADISON-Community-based organizations and local officials seeking to promote business growth and development will want to apply for project funding through Community-Based Economic Development (CBED) Program in the Department of Commerce (Commerce). Application deadline is January 12, 2007.

"The CBED Program has played an important role in developing strong organizational capacity to support local economic development activities," said Commerce Secretary Mary P. Burke. "We want to support activities that will have the greatest impact on local economies and the state as a whole."

The CBED Program awards grants to community-based organizations for development and business assistance projects and to municipalities for economic development planning. The program also helps community-based organizations plan, build, and create business and technology-based incubators, and can also capitalize an incubator tenant revolving-loan

Commerce will show preference to applications that address the following program priorities: * Support activities designed to develop or expand tech-

- based incubators.
- * Target promising and innovative community-based projects that promote entrepreneurship
- * Promote a regional approach to community development and encourage collaboration between multiple organizations to implement a unique or innovative solution to a local development problem.

To apply, or for additional program information, contact Doug Thurlow, Commerce, 608/266-7942.

Heifer International has country. Susan Daniels, Midwest Field Coordinator, joined the Heifer International staff February, 2006. Her office is located in Shawano, Wisconsin. Susan has been assigned to work with indigenous communities both on and off reservation Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Susan works with Paul Smith, Director of the Indigenous Peoples Initiative of Heifer International. Paul's office is located in Green Bay, Wisconsin. Together, Paul and Susan have been working to get the word out in Indian Country that field staff is available to native communities. While Paul is responsible for development of projects in all of the United States and Canada, Susan's focus is in this three state area.

As Heifer staff, we seek long-term solutions that build the capacity of communities to work together to address nutritional, economic, environmental and social needs through family-scale agricultural projects. Its success depends upon the active participation of community

Sustainable agriculture has typically helped raise the bar on farming practices in terms of their impact on the envifield staff located across the ronment, economic realities and social relationships. Driven to save family farming and small farms, the movement has been largely based in rural areas.

> Community food security emphasizes the need for everyone to have access to good quality, culturally appropriate food. It seeks to move beyond "food pantries and soup kitchens" addressing underlying causes of food insecurity and hunger. Given its drive to meet the needs of the "food insecure" populations, this movement has had a more urban audi-

Greetings from the Farm

As is my semi annual custom, I wanted to drop a message on the farms progress this fall.

It has been a busy fall, and as of November 15th, we can say all field work is complet-

This fall we will still be tiling about 50 acres. We were able to thoroughly accomplish long overdue tillage and we are very happy to report this accomplishment to you. Our contract with Tidy View Farm, I feel has worked very well this year. We converted most of the corn grain acres to silage, because of the wet spring causing replant acres, which caused the corn to be very uneven in moisture.

This conversion of selling silage was a big savings for the Farm in the areas of fuel, as well as labor, because the customer did all the harvesting. The price paid for silage was converted to the price paid on the grain market rate. still giving the farm a good return. This price is based on the market for a one year period and the final adjustments will be made to the farm after the first of the year.

Along with our contract received at no cost about four million gallons of liquid manure, (liquid gold) applied to a number of acres, staying with in compliance regulations and all other issues involved.

This liquid manure should show a plus for our fertilizer cost in the future, due to the nutrient value in the manure.

The Oneida Nation Farms participated for the second year in the state corn grain plot, with reports that yields were impressive considering the rain fall and weather conditions for this area.

The 580 acres of soybean crop did relatively well, averaging about 42-45 bushel to the acre, all sold with an average of $5.61 bushel.

Alfalfa crop production vielded excellent, plus we were able to sell a couple hundred acres of fourth cutting, due to the fact we produced enough in storage for our operation.

The entire livestock herd is producing excellent, we just weaned off several 700 pound calves born this spring The beef fall roundup for the beef and buffalo is complete with vaccination and worming.

The farm staff is the working crew for the Buffalo so the farm staff will be working on designing and building a corral at the buffalo site serving two main purposes:

1. Safety to workers,

2. Safety and lower stress to the animal.

Behind the farm work scenes these accomplishment could not happened without a very good work force. My Thanks to my Ag workers, Fischer, Gary Leo Mencheski, Duane Ihde, Chris Cornelius, Karla Habeck and Scott Schumacher. I want to commend my two ET workers, Karla and Scott, they are both excellent workers in all areas, always nice to see the smiles on their faces. As always a huge Thank You to Patricia Cornelius, Farm Manager, and Marlene Westgor, Farm Administrative Assistant, for putting up with me thru har-Great Gals to work

Local animals, especially birds, have been reacting to, and interacting with, daily and seasonal weather changes for thousands of generations. Many of the rituals, beliefs and folklore of our forefathers came from direct observation of how animals reacted to environmental conditions. Watching wild animals was a valuable information source for predicting weather changes prior to modern weather forecasting. All animals are dependent upon weather for guiding their

Climate and day length are the two major factors involved in the timing of bird adequate food source. migrations. Birds that migrate to the tropics respond to the sun's angle and day length to initiate migrations both north and south. The climate in the tropics changes very little so when the time is right the birds trust that conditions for the trip will be appropriate for them to fly north. An illustration that day length and not weather is responsible for some bird migrations is the documented annual, same date, spring return of swallows to San Juan Capistrano, California. Sometimes this blind faith can lead to the deaths of millions of birds due to weather conditions or food shortages along the flight path. Scientists have studied how birds that migrate to the tropics react to day length. By putting birds in cages and monitoring their movements within the cages scientists found that there is a definite increase in activity on the north side of the cage as more sunlight is simulated and a movement toward the south side of the cage as light is taken away. Birds can be fooled to be completely out of sink with actual day length, responding only to artificial hours of light. The term given to this phenomenon is "zugunruhe" (a word crediting German scientists who first studied the phenome-

Eagles will stay in an area as long as there is an

Birds that respond to climate include those that only migrate as far south as necessary to deal with the environmental conditions (climate and food). For some species, migration may not be every year or it may relate to habitat or food availability. Large numbers of Canada geese and mallard ducks, for example, will stay here in the winter if food is available (snow is not too deep) and open water is present. Bald eagles, redtailed hawks and most owls do not migrate if food is available on or close to their summer breeding territory.

For most birds it is not the cold that pushes them to migrate, it is the difficulty in finding food. Bird beaks have adapted over thousands of generations to feed on particular foods. If those foods are not available the birds may not be able to feed even if a food source is available that would provide their nutrient needs. Woodcock, for example, have a rather unique bill adaptation. They can open the very tip and suck up an earthworm without having to open their entire beak. This adaptation is not much help if the ground is frozen.

When you observe birds or other animals try to understand how they have adapted to live where they do. Watching how birds and other animals react to weather and day length changes will provide insight into how our forefathers used animals to shape their daily lives. Animals were used for more than food and clothing. They were an early warning system for weather changes.

On January 4th, farmers, farm group leaders, nonprofit advocates, educators, and others will gather to share information on efforts around the state to expand Wisconsin's local food markets. Wisconsin is a leader in local food innovations with a large and growing number of farmers markets Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) farms. Building on these successes, a number of initiatives around the state are attempting to expand local food markets by increasing institutional purchasing of Wisconsin grown products. From schools to hospitals, farmers and others are connecting with institutional buyers to expand their markets. These efforts and other innovations, including farmer-owned produce auctions, community kitchens, and marketing campaigns, will be discussed at the Wisconsin Local Food

If you are a part of a local food effort, the Summit will offer an excellent opportunity to share your experiences and learn from others around the state. Brian Halweil of the WorldWatch Institute and "Eat Here: author of Reclaiming Homegrown Pleasures in a Global Supermarket" is the keynote speaker. Rod Nilsestuen, Secretary of the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, and Consumer Protection will be speaking during the lunch which will feature locally grown foods. The Summit will take place in Stevens Point on January 4th. To request a brochure or ence, please contact Jane Hansen, 715-339-2555, jane.hansen@ces.uwex.edu or Rose Skora, 262-857-1948, rose.skora@ces.uwex.edu.

Registration is $30 if received by December 11th and $40 after that date. For a listing of some of the Wisconsin local food projects and a link to the registration brochure, please go to: http://aic.uwex.edu/localfood.cfm

The Wisconsin Local Food Summit is supported in part from a USDA Agriculture and Entrepreneur Grant, UW Cooperative Extension and a variety of organizations including the Department of Agriculture, and Consumer Protection, Michael Fields Agricultural Institute, etc.
